CAPT. MERRILL SAYS HE HAD A LAPSE OF MEMORY

Slayer of I. C. R. Clerk Committed for trial at Moncton---Made Brief Statement to The Court---Says His Memory Has Been Defective Since He was Gassed by Huns.

Moncton, Oct. 18.—That as a result of being gassed by Germans while fighting in France, he has had lapses of memory, and was in such a condition yesterday, was the statement of Capt. John E. Merrill at the preliminary examination here this afternoon on the charge of murdering John F. Rogers in the I. C. R. general offices.

Merrill made the statement when asked by Magistrate Steeves if he had anything to say, just before being committed for trial at the session of the Supreme Court, which opens at Dorchester on Tuesday next.

The preliminary examination began about 3 o'clock this afternoon, F. P. Murphy appearing for the crown and Major C. L. Hanington and E. R. McDonald, Sheldiac, for the accused.

Thos. Walsh, I. C. R. clerk, was the first witness. He went to the basement in the elevator about 2.35 and saw the accused pull down a gun; he saw the flash, heard the report of the gun, and saw Rogers fall. When the accused came upstairs from the basement he put out his hand to F. J. Landry. Walsh grabbed him by the other hand and they held him. Merrill said 'twas all right. To Major Hanington the witness said the accused seemed to be under the influence of liquor.

Dr. F. J. White saw John Rogers lying on the floor with his face and chest covered with blood. He was unconscious, the bullet having made a clean cut hole, entering below the shoulder blade and out the right side.

Clarence C. Dryden, I. C. R. clerk, saw Merrill and Rogers in the basement and heard the accused say to Rogers: "Stand, stand, stand." He ran to get more clerks and returning, saw Rogers dragging himself upstairs after he had been shot.

F. J. Landry, I. C. R. clerk, said when Merrill came towards him after the shooting, he said, "Hello, friend, it's all right." Walsh and another fellow helped him hold Merrill.

Roy Gould, stenographer, saw the accused draw a revolver with his right hand, and heard the shot. He helped to hold the accused, who seemed under the influence of liquor. He heard the accused say something in a mumbling tone like "I knew him." He heard him mumbling before the shot was fired.

Chief of Police Rideout said there were two cartridges in the revolver, one loaded and the other empty. He received from an officer the piece of lead supposed to have passed through Rogers' body.

Trueman Colpitts saw the accused get off the Ocean Limited on its arrival from Halifax and come in the direction of the General Offices. The witness took the revolver from Merrill when Walsh and Landry were holding him. When Merrill got off the train the witness noticed that he had a splendid military appearance.

Judge Steeves asked the accused if he had anything to say. The prisoner conferred with his counsel and then made the following statement:

"Shortly after the beginning of the war I went overseas and have been in the trenches up to three months ago. I was wounded three times and gassed once. Since I was gassed I have had lapses of memory. I had one yesterday. I do not remember anything after I went into the dining car yesterday until the Chief had me down last night. This is all I have to say."

The accused was then committed for trial.

Merrill, in his statement to Chief of Police Rideout said he was born in West Hartlepool, Eng. He was a private in the Princess Pats and won promotion on the field. He was promoted into the Imperial service as second lieutenant in the King's Own Lancashire Regiment, 10th Reserve Battalion. He has his old battalion badges, also the cap and feather of the 246th Highlanders (N.S.), in which he says he is acting captain.

Motor Combined

The city service ladder truck and chemical engine will have a fifty gallon tank of chemicals and 236 feet of ladders. Should the city at a later date desire to purchase a motor truck to replace this, the company will take it back and allow for it on the price of a new truck. The one-horse ladder truck now in use will go into the discard. It was built more than forty years ago and was long used as a hand-truck. It was built locally at the Edgcombe carriage factory.

It is probable that the horse on the reserve hose cart will be available for other city work when not actually hauling the hose cart.
