Had Palpitation OF THE HEART

ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.
Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T.
Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Molly Beamish

"Madam," said Jerningham, in a tone of respect such as she had never heard him use before, "set your mind at rest about the black. At dawn tomorrow a servant shall ride post haste to town to order the things, even if that servant be myself."

She was dumb for a moment at the speech, then she gave a little laugh.
"Blood will out and show itself, even in the dark, even in a coach alone with an old woman. Rupert, I thank you."

They had never addressed each other so formally before, and Mr.
Jerningham, who had been watching intently for the first sign of the Chase, felt a relief when the griffins guarding the gateway of the avenue drew in sight.

Though he had said nothing to Molly Beamish on the matter, he knew the Chase, both house and grounds, well, being a friend of Todmorden; indeed, in that very room where he had insulted Mufson and Mufson had insulted Molly he had won a thousand guineas from Todmorden at piquet. He put his head out, and called to the postillions to turn in at the gates, and in less than two minutes the coach of the March-ioness of Bladon was standing at the hall-door steps, and the March-ioness, helped on the one side by Joe who had heard the sound of the wheels, and on the other by Mr. Jern-ingham, was descending from her coach and entering the temporary house of the detested Beamishes.

There was a fire alight in the dining-room and a choice little supper spread on the table; a punch-kettle stood on the hob, a bottle of brandy on the sideboard, flanked by bottles of burgundy and white wine.

The whole visible house, in fact, from the well lighted hall to the punch-kettle on the hob, wore an air of comfort and prosperity, the fictitious creation of that gentleman known to the aristocracy as Gentleman Joe.
The Marchioness, enormous in her travelling cape and get-up, took her seat on a chair, whilst her companion poured her out a petit verre. He had got her safely to the Chase, but the question remained, would he be able to keep her there, or would she insist on continuing her journey to my Lady Dexter's?

IX.

Even whilst Miss Beamish had been reeling past the Pantiles, the last of Sir Peter Dexter's guests were arriving, in the form of Turtle Shrimpton and his daughter.

There were present the above named, Lady Poyns, a woman extraordinarily like a parrot; Lady Congreve stout, snub-nosed, looking like a pug dressed in brocade; Mufson, Mr.
Shawbury and several others.

With the exception of the Dexters, none of these people belonged to the core of good society; city knights and their women-folk or well-to-do commoners, all of them. The Dextters, however, belonged to a good old family. Sir Peter was the last of four baronets, and Lady Dexter was a Thurlow of Thursk. They might have gone anywhere and held their own with the best in the land but for their poverty. They were horribly poor on seven hundred a year, almost as poor as the Beamishes on nothing and not nearly so happy and contented.

All these people were ranged about the room, engaging one another in polite conversation; Mufson, the centre of a little group to whom he was telling of his experience with the highwayman the night before, without mentioning, however, his second meeting with that person; Sir Peter Dexter, on the hearth-rug, discussing politics with Turtle Shrimpton, and Lady Dexter, explaining the dear Marchioness and her peculiarities to a bevy of interested females; thus were they placed when a sound from the street outside brought conversation to a standstill and Sir Peter Dexter to the window.

The sound of a multitude turning into St. George's Road, the tramping of many feet, cat calls, cries, laughter and the barking of the inevitable dog.

"What is it, Sir Peter?" asked Lady Dexter, ranging up behind her spouse and peeping over his shoulder, whilst the rest of the guests crowded to the other windows.

"I faith, I don't know," replied Sir Peter, "or what the watch is about to allow such a turmoil. Disgraceful rabble! . . . Why, 't is a chair, and, by my faith, the chairmen are intoxicated! Disgraceful—in St. George's Road, too!"

"Why, they are stopping here!" cried Lady Dexter, in whose mind the wild idea had suddenly sprung up that perhaps the coach of the March-ioness had broken down and this was her ladyship completing her journey in a sedan-chair.

"Sir Peter, run down and see. It may be—"
A thunderous knock at the halldoor completed her idea and put it in words.

"It is the dear Marchioness, ladles! Her coach must have come by an accident. Sir Peter, run down and receive her. Lal to think of such a contretemps! A broken down coach and nothing but intoxicated chairmen to be found. 'T is a disgrace to the Wells. Sophia, my vin-aigrette."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS Why Demanded

"Gin Pills did for my husband and me what no other remedy could. I have advised two other parties to use them, one of them being my mother who has been a great sufferer for upwards of 20 years, and one box cured her, so as to enable her to sleep on her left side, something she could not do for many a year.
The doctors told her they could not cure her, but could relieve her by an operation for a floating kidney, but on account of her age they did not think it advisable for her to go. Upon my advice she tried Gin Pills which cured her and for which she is ever ready to speak in terms of praise."

Woman's Column

THE WAY TO FRY FISH

"Because it requires little effort and little time, frying is one of the favorite methods of cooking almost every kind of fish," said Aunt Jane.
"It should be remembered, however, that even this simple operation has a proper and improper mode of procedure."

"In the first place, as a rule, fish should not be cut into round slices, but should be cut into filets.
This again is an operation which few cooks have mastered. The fish should be laid on a flat surface.
With a sharp knife makes an incision at the back of the head.
Continue this to the tail, cutting the flesh on one side entirely away from the backbone. This operation repeated with the other side of the fish gives two long slabs of fish flesh. The heavy backbone has been eliminated and the fish is eaten more easily. Also, instead of having a thick chunk of flesh, which cooks imperfectly, you have a slice of uniform thickness, which cooks evenly and can be browned a great deal better."

"Scrod, haddock, cod, cusk, and in fact, all round fishes' except smelt and other smaller varieties, should be cut in this manner when they are to be fried. Halibut, albacore, swordfish and other fish of a similar nature, are, of course, usually cut in round slices, while small fish, such as smelt, butterfish and tinker mackerel, are cooked whole."

"Fish should always be fried, like doughnuts, in deep fat. Bacon drippings are perhaps as good a material as any. Butter should not be used for frying fish."

"It should be cooked until well browned and then removed and allowed to drain, but not grow cool before serving. If the filets prepared as above are cut into individual portions before being cooked the housewife will have no crumpled mass of fish as the result of her labors, but firm, well cooked, brow-squares of delicious food."

COD STEAK WITH BACON

Cod steak with bacon is another easy dish and will tend to modify the outlay upon bacon. Cover the slice of cod with bread crumbs, season with savory herbs and parsley, and bind with a beaten egg.
Put a thin rasher of bacon on the top of the fish and bake for twenty minutes, serving it with anchovy sauce.

SAUCE FOR ANY PUDDING

Two eggs, one quart of milk, two level tablespoons of cornstarch two tablespoons of sugar. Leave out whites of eggs. Put milk to heat till near boiling. Beat yolks of eggs, add sugar and cornstarch, stirred together; put in milk and stir until it thickens. Take pinch of salt; all whites beaten to a stiff froth. Put egg-beater in sauce and beat up.

DON'TS FOR SPRING

Don't buy a suit with a plaited skirt unless you have an electric iron and lots of time or else a French maid.

Don't buy one that is a bit too small, for the present style coat, with its flaring hem, looks especially bad in a size too small.

Don't if you're over five feet six get up and down stripes.

Don't if you're under five feet three get round-about trimming.
