"Our friend French," he remarked, "gave you no clue, I suppose, as to the direction in which his investigations are leading him?"
Quest glanced up from the map.
"None at all. I know, however, that the house in which Lenora here was confined is being watched closely." The professor glanced across toward the table before which Lenora was seated.
"It seems strange," he continued, "that the young lady should have so little to tell us about her incarceration." Lenora shivered for a moment.
"What could there be to tell," she asked, "except that it was all horrible, and that I felt things—felt dangers—which I couldn't describe." The professor gave vent to an impatient little exclamation.
"I am not speaking for fancies," he persisted. "You had food brought to you, for instance. Could you never see the hand which placed it inside your room? Could you hear nothing of the footsteps of the person who brought it? Could you not even surmise whether it were a man or a woman?"
Lenora answered him with an evident effort. She had barely, as yet, recovered from the shock of those awful hours.
"The person who brought me the food," she said, "came at night—never in the daytime. I never heard anything. The most I ever saw was once —I happened to be looking toward the door and I saw a pair of hands—nothing more—setting down a tray. I shrieked and called out. I think that I almost fainted. When I found courage enough to look, there was nothing there but the tray upon the floor." The professor sighed as he turned away.
"It is evident, I am afraid," he said, "that Miss Lenora's evidence will help no one. As an expert in these affairs, Mr. Quest, does it not seem to you that her imprisonment was just a little purposeless? There seems to have been no attempt to harm her in any way."
"Whoever took the risk of abducting her," Quest pointed out grimly, "did it for a purpose. That purpose would probably have been developed in course of time. However we look at it, Mr. Ashleigh, there was only one man who must have been anxious to get her out of the way, and that man was Craig. Here comes our friend French. I have an idea that he has something to tell us."

They glanced expectantly towards the door as French entered. The inspector, who was looking very spruce and well brushed, wished them a general good-morning. His eyes rested last and longest upon Laura, who seemed, however, unconscious of his presence.
"Now, then, French," Quest began, as he returned his greeting, "take a cigar, make yourself comfortable in that chair and let us have your news.
As you see, we have obeyed orders.
We are all ready to follow you anywhere."
"It won't be to the end of the world, anyway," the inspector remarked, as he lit his cigar. "I am going to propose a little excursion down Gayson avenue way."
"Back to that house?" Lenora exclaimed with a grimace.
The inspector nodded.
"We have had those boys at the station," he went on, "and we have questioned them carefully. It seems that after they had picked up the ball, a man came out of the side entrance of the house, saw them reading Miss Lenora's message, and shouted after them. The boys had sense enough to scoot. The man ran after them, but had to give it up. Here is their description of him."
The inspector took a piece of paper from his pocket. They all waited breathlessly.
"Had to drag this out of the boys, bit by bit," the inspector proceeded, "but boiled down and put into reasonable language, this is what it comes to: A man of medium height, rather thin, pale, and after running a short distance he put his hand to his heart, as though out of breath.
One of the boys thought his nose was a little hooked, and they both remarked upon the fact that although he shouted after them, he used no swear words, but simply tried to induce them to stop. This description suggests anything to you, gentlemen?"
"Craig," Lenora said firmly.
"It is a very accurate description of Craig," Sanford Quest agreed.
The professor looked troubled, also a little perplexed. He said nothing, however.
"Under these circumstances," the inspector continued, "I have had the house watched, and I propose that we now search it systematically. It is very possible that something may transpire to help us. Of course, my men went through it roughly when we brought Miss Lenora away, but that wasn't anything of a search to

RECIPES WORTH TRYING.

Sour Cream Cake—Three eggs, 2 cups sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon lemon, 1 scant teaspoon soda, 1 cup rich sour cream, 3 cups flour. Beat yolks of eggs until light and thick. Add sugar, the whites beaten stiff, the salt and lemon. Dissolve soda in cream, add flour; bake in a shallow pan.

Plain Chocolate Cake—Cream together 1 1/2 cups sugar, 1-2 cup butter, stir in the beaten yolks of 3 eggs, 1-2 cup milk, in which is dissolved 1-2 teaspoon of soda, 8 heaping tablespoons grated chocolate and 3 heaping tablespoons boiling milk, add 2 cups flour, sifted with 1 teaspoon cream of tartar, beaten white of the eggs, reserving one for frosting. Bake about 1 hour.

Pineapple Sherbet—Two cups grated fresh or canned pineapple, 2 cups sugar, 1 cup water, juice of 1 lemon, whites of 2 eggs. Make syrup of sugar and water; cool add pineapple and lemon juice; partially freeze; add the well-beaten egg white; finish freezing; ripen well.

FOR WOMEN OF MATURE YEARS.

Costuming the woman of middle age is at the present time more a question of figure than years. For the women of mature years who, however, favor gowns that through their material and style line express a certain dignity, the soft satins now winning strong popularity, and foulards, an admirable summer silk, are excellent selections. Soft draperies are to be selected as against a "bouffant" arrangement, and princess and redingote lines are almost uniformly becoming.

Quite the smartest and newest frocks offered at the present time are those made of serge, gaberdine or tricet combined with soft taffeta satin and silk, or wool marquisette and featured as "coat" dresses. All of the fabrics mentioned except marquisette have been many times referred to as fall favorites, but marquisette as a combination for the sturdy wool weaves is quite new, and the frocks developed with this material as an important part of them are extremely good looking.

THE APPAM OWNERS WIN OUT IN COURT

Norfolk, July 30.—Federal Judge Waddill yesterday decided the libel proceedings for possession of the captured British liner Appam in favor of the English owners, and against the German prize crew which brought her here.

The court held that the German government lost all legal claim to the Appam and her cargo as prizes of war when Lieutenant Berg and his prize crew on last Feb. 1st brought them into the neutral waters of Hampton Roads, with the intention of "laying up" the vessel indefinitely.

The Turks are at a disadvantage
