She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Feairs, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

TOO EARLY FOR PICNICS.

I'd like to go Maying,
But May is not here,
And winds that come playing Are often severe.

I'd be quite a rover
For blossoms and buds
If I could discover
Some steam-heated woods.

I'd like to go Maying
But we must allow It's too cool for straying Or Aprilling now.

Miss Phoenix

"Perhaps he'll come out for me," suggested Gertrude.

Whereupon it was agreed that Laura should step into the little butler's pantry and leave the field clear entirely to Mrs. Gray, who was to try to entice Townsend out of his cave and show him the error of his ways. The plan succeeded admirably for, after Gertrude had knocked on the door several times and had urged him in many different ways and interventions to come out and speak with her, Townsend realized that some strange woman had entered his apartment, for the voice was surely not Laura's. He opened the door and came into the study, where Gertrude greeted him with a radiant smile. Townsend blinked and stammered a moment.

"Isn't— isn't this Miss Phoenix?" he asked.

"The same," replied Mrs. Gray gaily.

"Of course!" laughed Harry Townsend. "I didn't recognize you at first with your clothes on—Oh, I mean, dressed in this way."

"Don't you think I look better?" she inquired.

"You looked very well yesterday," he replied gallantly. "But, Miss Phoenix, what are you doing here?"

And he looked about the room to assure himself that Laura was not there.

"How did you get in?" he added.

"I came through the door," Mrs.
Gray replied, "and I was not carried in this time. I have come because I have something to talk with you about."

"But, my dear Miss Phoenix," protested Townsend, "you should not come to my apartment like this.
You must realize that it would be extremely compromising for you if any one came in and found you here."

"But, you see," smiled Miss Phoenix, "I am compromised already."

"So!" exclaimed Townsend, whose mind was still balanced at a single angle. "So you are compromised already! To that, I presume, I owe the honor of this visit. I suppose you have come to seek reparation."

"Reparation?" queried Miss Phoenix.

"We will call it reparation," said Townsend, with a slight sneer "to use a polite term. No doubt liquidation is more in the line of your purpose."

"Mr. Townsend!" exclaimed Mrs.
Gray, in utter amazement.

"Now, don't carry on," he continued. "You may think I'm an easy mark, but I'm not. You can't hold me up. I regret that I must close this interview. Allow me."

And he stepped to the hall and opened the door to usher Miss Phoenix out.

Mrs. Gray, however, was in such a rage of indignation that, even if she had been willing to leave the room, she was actually too angry to move.

Also, when Townsend threw open the door, two men, pounding up the steps, turned toward him, and were soon disclosed as Jack Gray and Doctor Sterling.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, Jack," cried Gertrude, encouraged at the sight of her protector.

"What are you doing here?" he inquired, fiercely.

And then, looking about him, he added:

"Where is that man? Where is Townsend?"

"Right here," Townsend replied, coming forward into the little group.

Jack made an effort to control himself.

"I want a few words with you," he began. "Perhaps it might be better for us to retire to another room."

"Certainly, if you prefer," acceded Townsend, a trifle puzzled.

"No, indeed," interrupted Gertrude.
"Have it out right here!"

"I thought I told you to go!" said Townsend to her, with scant courtesy.

"In spite of your insulting manner, sir—" began Gertrude.

"Have you been insulting this lady?" cried Jack savagely.

BEAD STRINGING MAY OUST FASHION'S KNITTING NEEDLE

I hope you know how to do bead-work. It will save you quite a good many dollars if you do. This summer we will hark back to the days when it was considered fashionable to wear great splashes of colored crystals over the surface of our clothes, in our hair and on our shoes.

There is no one period of bead-work that rules the day. From the era of Louis XV. to that of Rainin-the-Face of Arizona, every design is applicable to the modern ostume.

Jenny has turned out one of the most satisfying one-piece gowns of the season. It is made of thin cafe-au-lait gabardine admirably draped in small pleats, the slightly low waistline outlined by the famous G string of the American Indian.

There are belts of red, blue and white beads; there are shoe buckles made of small beads after the manner of French baskets; there are stomachers of beads in oriental coloring to be placed on the front of belts, and there are gowns embrodered in Louis XV. designs of crystals, which are intended for the most elaborate evening wear.

Brilliant, Barbaric Beading.

Drecol has got out a most fascinating theatre and house gown of black satin and chiffon, the skirt of which hangs against the figure, although it is slightly full. It reaches out at each side of the back into points that hang on the floor and which are weighed down with tassels of tarnished gold beads.
The whole hem of the skirt rests on the floor.

Over this skirt there is a chemise of black chiffon which hangs straight from shoulder to hips, showing a tightly draped body lining of flesh pink satin and tulle.

The chemise itself has a collarless, high neck, made on the Moyenage line, straight across the shoulders.
The straight edges of the material beneath the arms are edged with bead embroidery and weighted on the hips with strands of tarnished gold. But the brilliant part of the gown is the placement of five or six plaques of turquoise blue beads with tiny centres of tarnished

The gown is such a direct contrast to the bouffant things we are going to wear this spring that it has created something of a sensation among the dressmakers, and every woman who sees it desires it, which means that we do not really want to wear these elaborately brocaded evening gowns which were cleverly described as "resembling Du Barry's bed."

One of Premet's Gowns.

The house of Premet has regained its distinction this spring, and American women will wear hundreds of copies of its best models.
One of these gowns is sketched today. It shows some brilliant effects in beading. This house has always been highly distinguished in needlework of M. Le Franc.

"The situation is satisfactory. Stephens Green has been occupied. Eleven insurgents have been killed. The provincial news is reassuring."
