PORTLAND, ME. PEOPLE AFTER PARTINGTON PROPERTY

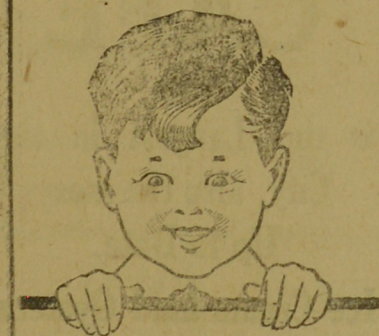

Hugh Chisholm Said to be Particularly Interested—Arrangements Almost Complete.

(St. John Globe.)

It is understood arrangements are almost completed for the sale of the property of the Edward Partington Pulp & Paper Co., Ltd., in New Brunswick. Negotiations have been in progress for some time between Portland, Me., capitalists and the owners of this valuable property, and the end has been nearly reached. At the head of the capitalists is Mr. Hugh Chisholm, of Portland, a millionaire, whose father was at the head of the great International Pulp & Paper Co. There is no hint of the price to be paid, but the sum must be very large, as the company's capital is about a million dollars. The property involved includes the mills at Reversible Falls, St. John, and the timber limits on the Nashwaak and other streams. The Partington company is a wealthy English concern. Mr. Thomas McAvity, St. John, is interested, and is a director. Under the new owners, business in St. John will go on as it has in the past.

The Mail on Tuesday mentioned the fact that the lands on the Nashwaak and Bartholomew rivers and property at Marysville and Blackville, owned by the Partington Co., were likely to change hands soon.

It is a physical impossibility for hearts to break, but there are lots of cracked brains.

Brightens One Up

There is something about Grape-Nuts food that brightens one up, infant or adult, both physically and mentally.

What is it?

Just its delightful flavor, and the nutriment of whole wheat and barley, including their wonderful body and nerve building mineral elements!

A crisp, ready-to-eat food, with a mild sweetness all its own; distinctive, delicious, satisfying—

HAS SPENT HALF HIS LIFE IN PRISON

Kansas Man Has Been Behind the Bars So Much That He Rather Likes It.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 27.—William H. Murray, who is 46 years old, has spent twenty-two years of his life in federal and state prisons. In the federal court the other day he pleaded guilty to robbing a post office and was sentenced to the federal prison for five years. Thus when he will have completed this new term the total of his years in prison will be increased to twenty-seven and he will be 51 years old.

The district attorney described the prisoner as “a criminal at heart; a criminal in mind, with a criminal face.”

There seemingly is no reform for Murray. He apparently doesn't want it. He has spent so many years in prison that he rather likes it. He scarcely knows a free life.

Having served a term in the Federal prison at Fort Leavenworth for counterfeiting, he was back in jail inside of a week on a charge of robbing the general store and post office at Aldrich. The State authorities got him first and he was sent to Jefferson City for five years. He was released on June 1 and Federal officers were waiting for him. The charge of robbing the post office was lodged against him.

On this charge he pleaded guilty recently. He had no lawyer, and when the court asked him if he had anything to say he responded: “Your honor, I have nothing to say; nothing at all.”

Murray is a native of Iowa and was twice confined in the penitentiary of his own state. He served two terms in the state penitentiary at Jefferson City.

Judges and prosecutors say they would be inclined to leniency with Murray if there appeared any hope for him; but the moment he is discharged from a prison he immediately plans new crimes and being a hard-luck criminal, he is almost immediately overtaken.

CALLING A CAB IN LONDON.

A Recent Regulation Prohibits Loud Whistling After 10 p. m.

London, Sept. 28.—Nearly every hotel, restaurant or house in the West End is provided with whistles to summon cabs. At certain hours of the night pandemonium reigned, and such complaint arose, due to the suffering caused wounded soldiers in hospitals by the blowing of these whistles that the city authorities have put a stop to the practice after ten o'clock at night.

Referring to the first night this law went into effect the London Daily Mail says:

Cabs crawled along the roadside with drivers eagerly peering through the gloom to see a fare. And the fares stood in rows like sparrows on a roof, whispering “taxi,” ever so softly, for fear the police should hear. Near the Alhambra there was a man whistling gently like a thrush, on the curbstone, with a fine expanse of evening shirt swelling out towards the road. Two men near the Criterion restaurant, arm in arm, were saying “cuckoo, cuckoo” with faces infinitely troubled, and a

PREPARATION FOR WINTER SHOULD BEGIN NOW

Hasten Poultry Through Moulting, Put Plant in Shape and Provide Green Food.

Late summer or early fall is none too soon for the poultryman to begin preparations for the winter. Even then the chances are that frost will find him not wholly prepared. Preparedness for winter in the poultry industry has a great influence on success. The start that a laying flock makes in the fall or early winter has a tremendous effect in determining whether the following five or six months' operations will constitute success or failure.

Getting the fowls through the moult as quickly as possible is one of the tasks of the foresighted poultry raiser. To get the coming season's layers through this period before the weather turns cool goes a long way toward inducing early laying. If nature itself is not doing this work in seasonable time, the poultryman may help by putting the laggards on “short rations” for ten days or two weeks, to start the old feathers falling. They are fed just enough to keep them alive; in other words, they are starved rather severely during this period.

They are fed as much as they will eat of highly nutritious food to bring out the new feathers. Feeds at this time should not be fattening, but rather of a variety to make quick all-around growth. These include cornmeal, ground oats and bran in a mash, and plenty of green food. Whole grains and animal food, grit, broken charcoal and plenty of pure water, are further requisites in carrying out this plan. Freedom from lice and mites is required.

Put Poultry Houses in Order.

Putting Poultry houses and equipment in a good state of repair is another task of importance in getting ready for the winter. The object is to have the house warm, dry and in good sanitary condition. Repairs to the house proper should be supplemented by a thorough cleaning and disinfecting, finishing up with a coat of whitewash on the interior.

If the house has an earthen floor two or three inches of the surface should be removed and replaced by as much fresh earth. In doing this one gets rid of the stench producing germs and vermin-infested droppings and the refuse accumulated during the summer that is so common in earth floor poultry houses at this time of year.

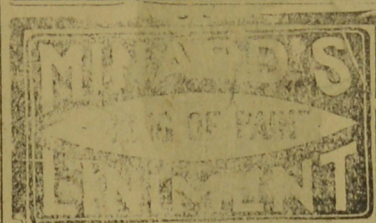

Such minor tasks as providing for a supply of green food, dust for dust baths, scratching litter, etc., may be attended to now to avoid delays later on. A supply of such vegetables as turnips, small potatoes and cabbage will meet this need.

A final and thorough culling of the flock is a very seasonable task in late summer or early fall. All surplus cockerels not hatched as breeders, old hens and other non-producers, should be sent to market after ten days or two weeks in the fattening pen. It is a waste of feed at any time to keep these undesirables in the flock, but more so in the winter when all feed must be supplied.

fatherly person, disdaining to pretend to be either a cuckoo or a thrush, got in front of a crawling cab and opened his umbrella. But the driver was engaged already and scolded his way past with a variety of noises.

It is a wonder that in these days of high cost of living the manufacture of doughnuts is not combined with the manufacture of Swiss cheese. Then the holes that are not used for one could be used for the other.

Best Liniment Made

MR. A. R. LAUNDY, LONDON, writes: “I fell from a building and received what the doctors called a very bad case of neuralgia, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks and that I must take a lot of medicine and in six days I was out to work again. I think it the best liniment made.”
