Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription
You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it:
"I was almost blind, could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would burn dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says:
"The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in ½ glass of water and allow to dissolve.
With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now as it is too late. Many honestly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constant use in eye troubles is well known among eye specialists and widely prescribed by them.
It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

Helping Hersey

BY BARONESS VON HUTTEN

Author of "Pam," "Kingsmead," "The Black Patch," etc

She wore a charmingly simple coat and skirt, of gray homespun, and her small felt hat, with an audacious twist to its brim, and a green quill in it, suited her very well. Behind her veil the paint was less apparent than it had been the day before. She looked very young and very pretty. Even Barnes, bored to death as he was by her sudden appearance, thought vaguely that she looked as if her hair were powdered.

"You want to see me?" he asked coldly.

He was the kindest of men, but the slightest suggestion of pursuit on the part of a woman met, as he mentally expressed it, his back up. But she either did not see it or chose to disregard his manner.

"Some and sit down for a few minutes, Michael," she said. "I must talk to you."

They were by chance alone in the room and also by chance they sat facing the Beata Beatrix. While he listened to what Mrs. Frewen had to say, Barnes's eyes were subconsciously studying the picture she had found him vainly trying to admire.

"You must be a little patient with me, Michael," she began, folding her hands on her lap. "I must go back, a little."

"All right, I'll be patient."
"You remember, of course, all about me—and Jim, and Gerald."

"Yes, I remember."

"Well—of course I was wicked—very wicked, according to your way of thinking. According to mine, I wasn't, but that doesn't matter. I was really only eighteen when Jim Barston married me, and—well, you knew him."

"Yes."

"He was," she pursued thoughtfully, "not exactly a bad man, but—he was a horrible husband. He didn't believe in God or in anything else, and of course, he soon taught me not to. Then he left me alone, amused himself any way he chose, and if I even spoke to another man, he was jealous and mad? the most awful scenes. Why, one night—"

Barnes stirred uneasily.

"Look here, Violet," he said, turning his fine blue eyes from the picture to her face, "what's the use of telling me these things?"

"I must, Michael—to make you understand. Well, then, when I was twenty-three Gerald came, and I fell in love with him. He was attractive," she murmured, her lips curving in an indulgent smile, "and he was such a dear. Jim liked him, too, at first, because poor Jim was a snob and Gerald was an Honorable —and then for his own sake. So—we were careless. Then, one night, Jim got very drunk and threatened to shoot me if I ever saw Gerald again. That, of course, was perfect nonsense. I didn't believe it, and Gerald didn't—and neither did Jim!
That was the week before the accident."

"I know," said Barnes, drily.

Did he not know? Had not every detail of the story come out in every paper in the United States?

"Well—then, as you remember, he pretended to go away and came back, and, finding poor Gerald with me, fired at him without a word of warning. Gerald, of course, tried to get the revolver away, and one of them —God alone knows which—shot poor Jim. It was dreadful," she added, "but it wasn't fair to call it murder."

"The jurors didn't," observed Barnes, still looking at the red-haired girl in the picture.

"No, but—well, you know it all.
When they let him off, we came to Europe at once and were married at Tours. Just remember all these things, Michael. They—help to explain—things."

"What things?" he asked, a little roughly.

"Well—Hersey."

"I don't see that at all. Hersey was three years old and can't remember a thing about it. Besides, she needs no explaining."

"Well, we, then. You see, when people cut me and I was thrown entirely on Gerald for companionship, I—I changed. I got very—hard and indifferent. All Gerald's people had refused to see him—not because he had shot Jim but because he married me. And he—he changed, of course.
We—were very happy, Michael."

He was about to murmur some word of sympathy, when she went on hurdledly:

"So, you see, poor Hersey grew up in a queer, anomalous position, and that—"

Barnes turned towards her, his face fierce.

"You seem to be excusing the poor child," he cried angrily. "That isn't fair, Violet. It—it is not fair."

She stood for a moment looking hard at him. Then her lip shook, the shaking turned to a curve of laughter, and she turned away. There was a long pause.

Barnes, staring with blind eyes at the Beatrix, wondered vaguely what she was up to now. Whatever her next move might be, it was sure to be a graceful one.

"Michael"—she had come back and stood with one hand on his arm, looking down—"Michael, you are right. I have always had an awful trick of defending myself—indirectly —at any one's expense. That is what you have just been thinking. Oh, I never was a fool, you know and I see it quite plainly. Well—I admit it.
You are right. Poor Hersey—I was trying to make you think she was being spoiled—so you'd want to marry her and—get her away from me.
Well—are you listening, Michael?"

"Yes, I am listening."

"She looked up and he watched her face intently as she went on.
"Well, I do want you to marry her, Michael, but I'll tell you the truth.
She is not spoiled. She is the sweetest child in the world; and she does her best—to love me. It is my fault, entirely, that she can't. That is why she is marrying poor Alfred Cox. To get away from me!"

Woman's Column

HELPFUL RECIPES.

Raisin Marmalade—Wash and dry 2 cups seeded raisins, and put through chopper, and place in a saucepan with 1 cup water and 1 teaspoonful salt. Boil slowly for thirty minutes. Add one teaspoonful lemon juice and 2 cups strained apple sauce. Simmer until thick then put in jelly glasses.

Rhubarb Betty—Butter 8 slices of bread, cut in cubes, arrange in baking dish in layers, with 2 cups chopped rhubarb and 2 cups sugar.
Steam one hour, covered. Remove cover and bake half an hour.

Washington Pie—Cream two teaspoons butter and 1 cup sugar, add 1 egg, ½ cup sweet milk, 1 cup flour, and 1 teaspoon baking powder. Bake in a round cake tin, and when done split open and fill with this filling. Take 1 and a half cups milk, 2 teaspoons cornstarch, add yolks of 2 eggs, half cup of sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 teaspoon butter. Cook until creamy. Beat the whites of eggs with three teaspoons powdered sugar, spread on cake and brown in oven.

A GIFT SUGGESTION.

A petticoat ruffle makes a nice and unusual gift for the birthday of a friend. Now that skirts are so voluminous most girls are reveling in fluffy ruffles to their heart's content. If you do not care to embroider the scalloping, which is really the tedious part of em-broidering a petticoat, have rather large shallow scallops piquet on batiste, nainsook or handkerchief linen.

You can then put a trifle more time on embroidering with skeleton stitchery a pretty design that will fit partly into the scallops.
The ruffle is then mounted on a beading of val lace or fine em-broidering and ribbon is run through and tied in a bow at the front side.

The flounce should be made quite wide, at least two yards and a half, so that when it is to be attached to the old petticoat or the new one, it will be wide enough to compare favorably with the full skirts now in vogue.

HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

After washing decanters turn them upside down and allow water from the cold water tap to run over them. In about five minutes they will be dry inside, and if the outside is carefully wiped and rubbed they will sparkle beautifully.

HELP FOR MRS. NEWLYWED.

"My meringue always falls. I wonder why, and if there isn't some way to stop it?" soliloquized Mrs. Newlywed.

"Try this recipe," comforted Mrs. Neighbor. "Beat the egg whites very light and dry, to each one use a tablespoonful of pulverized sugar, beat in gradually, add half a teaspoonful of vanilla extract, beat again until dry and glossy, drop by spoonfuls on the pie, put in a moderate oven with the door open for twenty minutes."
