Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes.
When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them.
It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Molly Beamish

And the lady killer, who had been tapping his chair with his tasselled cane, drew his chair an inch closer.

"I hate common things," said Miss Beamish, drawing an inch further away, and looking her vis-a-vis over, and wishing that he would be gone.

"But it seems, sir, we have wandered from the point of that business to which you had wound yourself up.
Have you found the key?"

"My dear Miss Beamish," said Mufton, suddenly lapsing from a grin to awful and portentous gravity, "it is the key to a lady's heart, the golden key which I am searching to find. I will not speak of the sentiment and affection which hurls away the aspersions of your enemies—"

"My enemies, sir?"

"I will not speak of the knowledge that has come to me of your unfortunate position—"

"My unfortunate position!" cried the now infuriated Miss Beamish, rising from her chair.

"I will not speak of the admiration which led to passion," went on Mufton, rising too, with his hand upon his heart. "I come—I came this morning urged by the tongues of the men, the women, who call themselves your friends—I came Miss Beamish—Miss Molly—may I dare to say that word?—to offer that help—"

"Stay, sir," said Molly, forcing herself to be calm. "Before we speak further, I must know what you have heard against me and by whom spoken?"

Mufton assumed an air of sincerity and bitterness.

"By whom spoken? By Lady Poyne by a dozen others who have gathered from your servants, from your tradesmen, from—"

"Oh, the wretches! They have heard we are poor—we are. That we owe money—we do. That—but stay, sir, your part in this business has still to be explained. Was it to respect those things that you came here this morning?"

"No, madam," replied Mufton, with a grandiloquent air. "To offer you my help."

"Ah!"

"A thousand guineas, nay, fifteen hundred, if my poor purse will find them."

"Ah!"

Molly's eyes filled with tears. She clapped her hands and unclapped them.

"I have always known you," she said, in a quivering voice, "as Mr.
Mufton of the Park. I now know you as the only generous man in Tunbridge Wells, sir. Your offer of this loan appeals to me by its kin-heartedness. My father will no doubt be pleased to be under the great debt to you. As for myself—"

"But," cried Mufton, taking her hand, "it is to you I offer it, not as a loan, but a gift—"

"A gift, sir?" cried the girl, not yet reading the meaning of the other "A gift?"

"A gift," replied the amorous Mufton, slipping an arm round her waist "asking only your sweet self in return."

She pushed him from her and held him by the arm as she gazed at him.

Then she released him and laughed bitterly.

"I presume you came here, sir, to offer me your hand in marriage. I say, in charity to you, I presume you came here to buy a wife for a thousand pounds. Well, wait, sir."

She went to the boudoir door, opened it and beckoned to Mr. Smith, who came into the drawing room.

"Mr. Smith," said Miss Beamish, "this gentleman has offered me a thousand pounds to take him as my husband. What do you say?"

"I should say he was dear at the price," replied Mr. Smith, recovering himself after a start which he had made at the sight of Mufton.

Mufton, at the voice of the other, mouth, also started and clapped the and before three words had left his quizzing-glass to his eye from force of habit, for he could see quite well without it.

"Fore gad!" said Mufton.

Then he wheeled, made for the open French window, glanced back with an extraordinary expression mixed of enmity, astonishment and triumph upon his face and vanished down the garden path.

Molly for a moment stood waver-ing between tears and laughter, then the insult contained in Mufton's words, the know that all these people were against her and the hatred of them, became too much for her.
She cast herself on the couch and wept.

Mr. Smith stood biting his nails, pale like a man who has received a blow or an insult he cannot avenge.

Then Molly sat up, her eyes flashing.

"Oh, the wretches! Oh, sir, if you had but heard that fool, did you but know these people, you would pity me that I cannot revenge myself upon them!"

She rose and paced the floor, her cheeks burning, her eyes flashing.

"They and their Marchioness of Blagdon—"

"The Marchioness of Blagdon!" cried Mr. Smith, caught away from his thoughts by the name. "What has she to do with them?"

Molly told in a few sentences that gave all details and left Lady Dexter without a feather of reputation.

"And you say she is coming to the Wells tonight?" asked the young man excitedly.

Woman's Column

RECIPES BY MARION HOLMES.

Tapioca Border With Fruit.

Put into a stewpan a pint of milk with half a bay leaf, a strip of lemon rind and one ounce of sugar. Let it come to a boil, then stir in one ounce of crushed or flaked tapioca, and cook gently (while stirring) for about 25 minutes. Remove the bay leaf and the lemon rind, stir in two egg yolks and re-heat; then allow to cool a little.
Whip up half a gill of cream and add it carefully. Dilute two to three tablespoonfuls of red currant jelly with a little wine or lemon jelly, put a layer of this at the bottom of a border mold, place it on the ice to set; then fill up with the prepared cream. Allow it to set in a cool place. Unmold carefully on a round dish, fill the centre of the border with fruit, compote, such as prunes (stoned), apples (cut in sections), pineapples (cut in cubes), slices of bananas and stoned cherries, cooked in a little syrup and allied to cool, and serve.

Chocolate Rice.

One half ounce of best rice, one and one-half ounces of grated chocolate, a lump of butter the size of a walnut, one and one-half pints of milk, a little short pastry, one egg. Boil the rice in milk till it is tender. Then add the chocolate. Beat up the egg and stir it in, also the little bit of butter. Take the pan off the fire before the egg is added, and don't boil the mixture any more. Line a deep pie dish with a thin short crust. Pour in the chocolate mixture and bake all in the oven till the crust is cooked. Serve hot. If this pudding is not entirely finished at one sitting, you can cut it into slices afterwards—a portion of chocolate on each slice of pastry—and serve it cold.

Fish Fritters.

Cut some stale slices of bread and spread them with a quarter of a pound of cooked fish (any kind) which has been pounded up with a little anchovy sauce and pepper and a tiny knob of butter. Place two slices together. Lay them all in a dish, pour over an egg beaten up with a little milk and well seasoned. Soak all night and when required fry a nice brown in hot fat, pile up on a hot dish and serve at once.

Escalloped Eggs and Pimientos.

Six hard-boiled eggs, two cups of thin white sauce, four canned pimentos, buttered breadcrumbs. Make a sauce with the juice from the pimentos and enough milk to make two cups, using four table-spoonfuls butter and three of flour. Put the eggs and sliced pimientos into a buttered baking dish. Pour the sauce over them, cover with buttered crumbs and bake till the crumbs are brown.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Don't urge the little one to toddle before nature permits. When the tiny limbs are strong enough, baby will walk of its own accord. Bandy legs and spinal trouble can often be traced to a premature strain upon infant limbs.

Soap jelly is a good shampoo. Into a pint of boiling water shave a small cake of the best white castile soap and let it stand until it is thick, then add a teaspoonful of glycerin and a few drops of your favorite perfume; the glycerin will soften and heal the scalp.
Wet the hair enough so that the jelly will adhere and rub until there is a thick lather on the head. Use an abundance of warm water to rinse the head, and continue with water gradually cooled until quite cold.

A good cold cream and a bottle of almond cream are indispensable to cold weather beauty seekers. Immediately after washing, while the skin is still glowing from the brisk drying, rub into the face and hands a little cold cream, working it well into the pores.
A bit of absorbent cotton passed lightly over the surface will remove all superfluous cream and a little powder dusted on will take away all the shine and the greasy look. Just before going out you should always rub in a little cold cream, for it will protect the skin in the best way.

WORTH KNOWING.

Colored handkerchiefs should be soaked in cold water for a short time before they are washed. This will prevent the colors from running or fading.

When about to clean paint in a kitchen or other room where there is a stove, heat a boiler of water and allow it to boil without a cover for a long time.

Clean the glass over pictures with a cloth wrung from hot water and dipped in alcohol. Polish them immediately until they are dry and glossy with chamolis or tissue paper.

Soap and powdered chalk mixed and rubbed on mildew spots will remove them. To expedite matters, let the spotted article lie in the sun for a few hours, dampening it again as it dries.
