B. B. LAW'S BODY WAS NOT FOUND

Ottawa, Feb. 25—The report sent out some days ago that the charred remains of some portions of the body of the late B. B. Law, M.P., had been found near the ruins of the commons chamber, turns out to have been erroneous. What was found was a conglomerate mass of rubble of iron, which it was thought at first might have contained some remains of the late member. Examination of this on behalf of the relatives of the late member has, however, failed to show any recognizable traces of human remains.

The debris of the burned buildings has now been nearly all removed and it is probable that the only obsequies of the late member for Yarmouth will remain the funeral pyre of the parliamentary buildings.

The full sessional indemnity of a member of parliament will be voted to the widow of the deceased member.

QUESTIONED ABOUT IMMIGRATION PLANS

Ottawa, Feb. 25—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has given notice of a series of questions dealing with the questions of immigrations. He asks if the government has taken up with the imperial authorities the question of greater co-operation in immigration in accordance with an offer contained in a letter from the Right Hon. John Burns and published in a special report in 1912. He asks further if the dominion government has approached the provincial governments with a view to the development of immigration and land settlement on systematic and scientific lines, and if there has been any action on the resolution passed last year in the Saskatchewan legislature proposing greater co-operation between the dominion and provincial governments in regard to immigration and production. He asked if a resolution has been received from the Toronto Board of Trade or other bodies asking for an improved immigration policy.
Finally, the Liberal leader gives notice that he will move for the correspondence between Arthur Hawkes and the government regarding a special report on immigration during 1912-13.

MAY BE HEARD FROM.

It is now said that the inquiry to be conducted by Commissioner Teed may touch upon the famous big note negotiated in the interests of purity during the Guthrie-Scott by-election. The endorers of the note, so it is generally understood, included the secretary of the public works department and this was known to the government at the time. Although the endorers had promised galore from members of the government that the note would be taken care of in the end the endorers had to dig down and pay up. The martyrs of this note are naturally feeling a little nervous over the promised enquiry. It is considered strange that the government should now want to get rid of an official whom two years ago they allowed to assist in financing an election.

C. P. R. Port Arthur in its early days.

Waterfront in 1885, Flaherty's in back ground.

"Flaherty's" in C. P. R. construction days.

Port Arthur at present time.

WHEN the Canadian Pacific Railway was but a promise unfulfilled, and at the time when "Section Fifteen and 'Section B'" were live spots, and the Big Men of the early seventies gathered together, it was at "Flaherty's," Port Arthur, they met. Flaherty's door was big and wide and hospitably open at all times and seasons. Flaherty himself, big bodied, big minded, and big hearted, standing in the doorway of his popular hostel, used to wag his head and say: "They say the C. P. R. is goin' to make the town, but Flaherty is goin' to make the railway!" He did, he made the railway builders comfortable.

Flaherty's may not be mentioned without naming its popular mistress, a lady from Belfast, "one of the Bogue's!" Flaherty used to say, proudly, for she it was who gave to "Prince Arthur's Landing" its first social stamp. The times were rough (as railway times ever are), but nothing was ever said or done at Flaherty's which wouldn't "pass" in any drawing room on the continent. Mrs. Flaherty was an exacting hostess; many a big fellow came into the house roaring like a lion—it being sheer exuberance of life—but in two seconds the biggest and roaringest of them was reduced to a lamb-like bleat! What a "mother" the gentle voiced lady was to all the down-and-outs in those early days! They were "unafraid" under Mrs. Flaherty's smile, for no request was ever refused and empty pockets were housed as were the "sure pays" in those pioneer days.

The town itself was a one-street-along-the-bay affair. The woods came right down to the water's edge. "Jim Conmee's mail" made the overland run to and from Duluth by dogs, and I hope someone has kept a photograph of the old "Ontario Bank," which blocked the highway, and like the Catholic Church, was "built upon a rock!" D. F. Burk and "Young Ray," now a distinguished citizen and financier of the new town, Port Arthur, were bursers of the bank, which was "the size of a minute," in those historic days.

But "Flaherty's" hotel, "The Queens," it was called, was then the rendezvous of the Big Men who were building the Big Road. Not one of them, no matter where he be to-day, but will remember the "little room" off the hall where these gigantic minds met to discuss way and means of the work. That little room with its horse-hair covered seats was a sort of "House-of-Parliament," there some of the big deals undertaken in that little room off the hall at Flaherty's, and during the solemn convocation, no one could get past Mrs. Flaherty herself, who like a bird defending a nest of her young, would keep off all and sundry, sending them to right and left, while the "millions" for the great work were "raised" in that little room fronting the bay.

Outside in the hall, dressed in his Sunday best, Thomas O'Hagan was waiting for "news." Thomas O'Hagan being the editor of "The Sentinel," whose voice filled all the spaces between Toronto and Winnipeg in those early days. Gentlemen, do you recollect Thomas O'Hagan, who ran what he called "The biggest weekly in all Nawrth America!" Well, if some were to uproot old files of "The Sentinel," I feel sure pickings for "Forty Years Ago" to-day might be found.

It was at Flaherty's I first met the late Mr. Van Horne, even then a grander, gayer hostel rise upon the old site. The eye is charged by changes, great changes, for the C. P. R. fulfilled its every promise and made a great city there, but memory brings back to mind the warm-hearted Flaherty himself and his smiling wife who to-day sleeps in the little cemetery beyond the town, where, if you go to a prettily kept green spot you will find: "Sacred to the memory of James and Elizabeth Flaherty," and a bunch of lately left blooms.
