Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonder-ful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

STALLIONS FOR SALE

I have decided to offer my entire stable of Stallions for sale. Their record in the Show Rings is proof that they are good individuals; and best of all, their record as breeders is unsurpassed.

DAY DREAM, No. 12801—Brown Clydesdale, prize winner in Maritime shows as well as in the shows of Ontario. The best breeding Clyde I ever knew: 1825 lbs. and the best looker on the streets.

BLACKBAND SENSATION, No. 2476—Brown Clydesdale, 1850 lbs., a sturdy, heavy-boned horse that will get good business anywhere, and a great breeder.

POTTER PALMER, No. 47432—A Standard Trotter, handsome as a picture, 1225 lbs., and a great show horse and a No. 1 breeder.

TRYFAST, No. 58509—Standard Trotter, the best bred in the land, has a 2-year-old record of 2:24½, and can trot as fast as any horse.

Above horses are offered for sale because of no fault. I will sell them with a guarantee they are O.K., and at prices that are right.

He—I told the jeweller it was for the smallest hand in Boston.

Molly Beamish

"I faith," said he, "there's not a tradesman in the 'Wells that won't be up here crawling on his knees when 't is known that her ladyship is coming. If you leave it to me, I'll stir them up. Duty is duty, but half an hour will take me down to the Pantiles and back—"

"Oh, if you can," cried Molly. "I will never forget it to you! But stay—I have never asked you to have refreshment. Here is wine and cake, and, yes, here is a clean glass. Please to help yourself. And I forgot, the wine and brandy for this evening are in that cupboard—it is unlocked. Now I will leave you and send Rose Cowslip to make the fire. And oh, if you would, whilst in the Wells, but order a chair for me to be here at eight o'clock."

"At eight o'clock, miss," replied the man of resource.

She could have kissed him in the warmth of her heart. He seemed to understand everything and to be able to do everything. She rushed upstairs and in the bedroom, where the packed trunk stood still open, she surprised Rose Cowslip. The small servant, had taken advantage of her mistress' absence to try on one of her hats. Surprised and paralyzed, she burst into tears under the immense structure, till Molly, laughing, snatched it off, rubbed her nose and sent her down to light the fire.

Then, singing in the lightness of her heart and seized with a new inspiration, she rushed into the guest bedroom, drew aside the blinds and tidied things. The marchioness would stay the night, if she came.

If she came! The thought suddenly struck the song from her lips. If she didn't! If Mr. Smith failed, if she went on to Lady Dexter's, if Joe obtained provisions on the strength of her ladyship's name! Heavens! what she had bound herself to! And all on the word of a man who had committed a light-hearted highway robbery only the night before and was being pursued by the law.

But Miss Beamish was a person not easily depressed; she took short views and the sight of her own pretty face reflected in a glass brought her courage up again. She kissed her hand to herself, laughed and running back to her room, began to make preparations for her toilet.

In the midst of these preparations a thought came to her that made her pause. There was not one penny in the house and how was she to pay the chairman?

"Oh, lud!" said she, sitting down on the couch opposite the trunk. "will troubles never cease, I wonder! This is what it is to be without money. And that odious Sophie Shrimpton arriving in a glass coach and I without a penny to pay a chair man! No matter; I will get there, at least, and then, when they bring me back, I'll tell them to 'ail for the money in the morning.'"

Enlivened by this thought, she continued her preparations till Rose Cowslip, released from duties below stairs, came up to help her to dress. The youthful servant, though destitute of memory, had one supreme art in which she excelled; she could light a fire using only two sticks in the act, though now, from the condition of her hands and face, one would never have suspected her of such restraint. Molly, having first washed the grubby one, reducing her again to tears, set to with her assistance to dress.

VII.

At quarter past eight Miss Beamish, beautiful in her china silk and pearls, descended the stairs to the drawing-room.

A jeweller might have criticised her pearls and a woman her dress, but to a plain man's eyes she was contentment, a disturbing and thrilling delight. Rose Cowslip followed, bearing her cloak and her fan.

The fan-bearer, having deposited her burden on the couch, was despatched by Miss Beamish to watch out for the chairman.

Then, left alone, Molly sat down in all her grandeur to wait for the chair and think things over. Leaving the chairman aside, there were other problems of a knotty nature for the evening to unravel. Would Mufson be at Lady Dexter's? Assuredly; he was the prime toady of the Wells, and one of the wealthiest men in the district—any newcomer with any sort of tuft was a sure attraction for him. Yes, he would be there; so would Lady Poyns, Lady Congreve, Mr. Shawbury and Sophie Shrimpton—all her enemies. The letters she had written to Lady Poyns and the others now returned to her like imps; she would have to face all these people and outface them if she could; hold her own, at any rate, till the news came—and you may be sure she had given Rose Cowslip instructions concerning the bearing of it—that her ladyship was stopping at the Chase, being too indisposed to travel further that night.

She was fancying their faces when Rose Cowslip, who had taken her stand at the door, came running with the news that the chair was in sight. As it came to the door and she was preparing to leave the hall, Joe materialized himself from the back premises. Rose Cowslip had shown him William's room and he had put on the livery coat left behind by the departed footman and by twilight or lamplight would pass.

He followed Molly out and opened the chair door for her; but before she could step in, one of the two chairmen interposed.

FASHIONGRAMS

Red Riding Hood Capes for the Small School Girl—Tete de Negre the Favorite Shade for Spring Millinery.

A cunning "party dress" designed for Miss Six-year-old is made of sheer white muslin, cut on empire lines, the short yoke hand embroidered, while around the bottom of this ciel blue ribbon is run through beading. The skirt is finished with several narrow tucks and the wide sleeves caught in at the wrists with ribbon bow-knots.

On rainy days the young school girl may be quite waterproof, even without an umbrella, if she wears a cunning Red Riding Hood cloak of blue or brown silk rubber lined with plaid, or made with a pointed hood that slips over the head. These capes have arm-holes and generous-sized pockets.

Zebra-like sweaters, hand-made, are among the smart novelties for the out-door girl. A striking one shown in an exclusive shop is of rose-colored wool made with gray stripes down the sleeves and back, while the collar is of gray angora. A jaunty little woolen tam o'shanter to match is finished with a coquettish ball of gray.

Tete de negre is a favorite shade for advanced spring millinery—brimless turbans, large sailors and sport hats are displayed in it. A chic turban of straw and silk, designed by Marie Guy, is trimmed with two sweeping quills that cross over the crown; the cachet of the model is a single pink-cheeked apple that hangs over the left ear.

A quaint and charming wrap of taffeta that changes from brown to violet reaches to the knees, and is made with a shoulder cape effect, edged with quilting of the same, and a military collar, trimmed with touches of narrow gilt braid. The lining is of rose-colored charmeuse.

A fetching mouse colored charmeuse costume that possesses the characteristics of prevailing fashions is made with a brief wide skirt veiled with chiffon caught in puffs over the hips, the tight fitting bodice made with balloon sleeves and trimmed with touches of lace. A smart narrow brimmed sailor to match is finished simply with black velvet birds painted around the crown.

New fawn-colored washabie geurteilt gloves are laced at the wrist like boccas, and are wide enough around the top to conceal a mouchoir, if milady so desires.

LAUNDRY HELPS

To have your clothes just as clean and white as possible, put a teaspoonful of peroxide in your soaking water. This acts as a harmless bleach to your linen. A slice of lemon in your boiler will also have the same effect. When bluing clothes, add just a little common table salt in the water. It helps to distribute the bluing and prevents the clothes from looking streaked or patched.

How many have heard the old legend, "The girl whose apron is wet, 'tis said, while she's over the tub, will never be wed." Fortunately, this catastrophe may be easily prevented by wrapping an old newspaper over the top of the washing board to absorb the water, which otherwise would soak into her dress.

The problems of quick laundering for your crepe de chine waist may be simplified by wrapping your waist, when it is first washed, in a turkish towel. This absorbs moisture quickly, but leaves sufficient dampness for it to be ironed easily.

White crepe de chine may be colored to one's taste by soaking crepe paper of the desired shade in water, using the result as a dye.

HOME MADE PHILOSOPHY.

Home made troubles are the kind that beget gray hairs.

He is wise who can gather dollars from another's lesson.

Next to woman the most changeable thing in the world is another woman.

If a married man has nothing to worry him his wife can always supply a because.

An innocent woman is one who imagines a man chews cloves because he really likes them.

A small man who marries a buxom widow is liable to be referred to as the "widow's mite."

Once in a great while a man is driven to drink, but as a rule they trot right up to it of their own accord.

It costs a lot of money to educate girls, and after they graduate very few of them are able to support a husband.

PITY THIS POOR GIRL!
SHE NEEDS SYMPATHY

Growing fast—yes, into weakness, but without strength. Tired, of course she is—pale and thin, too. She doesn't eat enough and digests far too little. This condition is so common, but how seldom noticed even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone—then watch her appetite improve—see her cheeks and lips grow ruddy—watch her spirits rise. This gain is simply the result of eating and digesting enough and thereby nourishing blood, brain and nerves. To a woman Ferrozone restores strength she has lost—to a girl it brings strength perhaps she never knew. You'll try Ferrozone, 50c. at all dealers.
