THE VICTORY LOAN.

The local committee deserve praise for the efficient manner in which they have brought the Victory Loan before the attention of the public, and it is to be hoped that the subscribers in this city may be many and generous. Although past Canadian loans have been over-subscribed, yet they have after all reached only a small proportion of our people, and in this respect differ from the recent British and United States loans. The present loan, however, being offered as it is, in sums as low as $50.00, and with very favorable terms of payment, should reach the great majority of our people. Children may invest their savings in it; parents can invest small sums for their children; the working class may subscribe their share, and the generous help the banks are offering in the way of credit with low interest upon these loans as collateral should materially increase the number of subscribers.

The reason for subscribing to the loan are both patriotic and economic. We are in the war to see it through. "If Germany wins, nothing else matters." Every true citizen feels the obligation to do whatever he can to help win the war. If he cannot fight, he can pay, and thereby provide the means whereby others may fight for him. At the beginning of this struggle we financed our share in it by borrowing from Great Britain. Prior to the war British capitalists had about two billions of dollars invested in Canada, and it is their money which made possible in a large measure our industrial and commercial development; but after a short time Great Britain became so heavily burdened by her own gigantic war expenditures and her generous loans to her Allies, that we turned to the markets of the United States and our securities found there ready acceptance. The United States thus became our creditor, not only in the matter of war bonds, but also in our industrial securities.

Today the United States is raising billions of dollars to meet her own war expenditures and to take the burden of financing the Allies from the shoulders of Great Britain. She has also provided credit for Great Britain in order that she may sell to her and her Allies foods, munitions and the equipments of war. At first Great Britain shipped gold to the United States in order to settle her trade balance. In two years our southern neighbor received from Europe nearly one billion dollars in gold, and she has today the largest holdings in gold of any country in the world. Then Great Britain mobilized her American securities and used them as collateral to settle her obligations, but since the advent of the United States into the war she has been able to secure from that country the necessary credit with which to finance her trade. The result is increased prosperity to the American farmer and manufacturer.

The Canadian government is now compelled to raise its capital for war purposes by an internal loan, and the money is absolutely essential to carry on the war. It is also necessary in order to finance the exportation of our cereals, animal products and manufactured goods. If we are to get our share of the Allied trade, it is necessary for us to follow the example of the United States, and to provide the credit necessary to effect the exchange. Money is a medium of exchange; it is as necessary to trade as a system of transportation. Our war loan, if it is successful, will be a stimulus to our industries—manufacturing and farming—and of great importance to the prosperity and well-being of our country. The success of this loan is necessary both for the prosecution of the war and for prosperity at home. Money, ships and food are the imperative needs of the war today. The Victory Loan provides the money and thereby helps to provide the food, and, in fact, the ships as well.

From the point of view of an individual investor, the Victory War Bond is a gilt-edged security with easy terms of payment, and a high rate of interest. There is no safer investment in Canada. Any talk of repudiation of national debts by responsible belligerent nations is absurd. Even if there should be a partial conscription of wealth to reduce the great obligations it would be a conscription of every form of wealth, and the holders of every form of securities or properties would suffer alike.

It has also the further inducement that it is exempt from the Federal income tax. It is difficult to advise the investor whether he should take the long or short term bond, but in general the long term bond would seem to be preferable. Prior to the war a bond of this character could be secured for an interest rate from 3½ to 4 per cent., and it is not unreasonable to suppose that in a few years after peace has been declared, the accumulation of capital will be so rapid that the interest rate will gradually lower, and this bond will be at a premium. The investor who then holds the long term bonds will be in a fortunate position, and should he desire to dispose of them he can very easily place them upon the exchange and sell at a premium.

The Liberals of Kings, N.S., have nominated Mr. A. E. Macmahon, president of the United Trust Company, as their candidate for the House of Commons. A proposal was made by the Conservatives that Premier Borden be given the seat by acclamation, but the Liberals declined to accept it.

It is to be earnestly hoped that the leading men of both political parties in York-Sunbury will be able to get together and find a candidate who enjoys public confidence to such a degree that he will not be opposed at the approaching election.

The cause of Union Government might be helped along considerably if some of the more rabid of the Tory newspapers could be muzzled until after the election.

Through Our Sieve

Get still another Victory bond.

One good bond deserves another.

Consider the clock, how it gets there hand over hand.

Count that day lost whose low, descending sun, sees no Victory bond subscribed for—swat the Hun!

There's one thing about politeness—it never has to be apologized for afterwards.

Every man is a live wire, and tact is the insulation which makes him safe to have around.

Presently a man will blush when money jingles in his pocket. He will be accused of hoarding wealth.

German citizens asked for liberty, and the Kaiser gave them a wallop at the Italians.

A whole lot of men seem to be willing to accept a nomination in York-Sunbury, providing it means an election by acclamation.

When a nation like Russia, not satisfied with an enemy or two to fight, starts two or three internal wars, the world immediately declares she wants peace.

Women are like photo plays. Those that manage to get the most shocking names often turn out to be the tamest and most insipid, while many a spic little thing is "passed by the censor" because she has that innocent, innocuous look at first glance.

MARYSVILLE HAPPENINGS

Marysville, Nov. 13. — The home of Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Pond was the scene of a very enjoyable surprise party Saturday evening when a number of their friends met at their home, the occasion being Mrs. Pond's birthday anniversary. A very pleasant time was spent with participation in games music and conversation. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Pond were presented with two comfortable rockers on behalf of the assemblage. They were taken completely by surprise but in a fitting manner thanked their many friends for the kind remembrance. Refreshments were served and the gathering dispersed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dolphin left last evening on a visit to Montreal. They were accompanied by Mrs. E. J. Kingsley, who will visit her former home at Cornwall, Ont.

Dr. W. S. Kierstead addressed a representative gathering at Oddfellows' hall last evening on the all-important subject of food conservation. His remarks were followed with deep interest and proved instructive.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SPEECH MADE A SENSATION

(Canadian Press direct wire.)
New York, Nov. 13.—An Associated Press cable from London this morning says:

"The speech made yesterday by Premier Lloyd George in Paris has made a stir in the local press, where his references to the Allies' incredible blunders and other matters are printed under sensational headlines.

"Comment on the speech is mixed with criticism of the new Allied War Council as given here yesterday by Chancellor Bonar Law. Some of the newspapers endorse the speech in the main, or are non-committal. Others criticize adversely the new military plan and accuse the premier of wishing to take over the strategic direction of the Allied campaign.

"Rumors in the Sunday newspapers of the impending retirement of Field Marshal Haig and General Robertson, chief of the general staff, caused some commentators to insinuate that the reports were sent after all intentionally by semi-official news.

"The Morning Post connects the new plan with the rumors, and says that both the nation and the army are alarmed over it. The Times says that the Premier let himself go and thereby opened the floodgates to a torrent of expert criticism."
