

Raising Live Stock In Western Canada

ACCORDING to a recent statement by Prof. W. L. Carlyle, late Dean of the Oklahoma State College of Agriculture, the live stock outlook in Alberta could hardly be excelled anywhere. Stockmen all over the country are looking to the Pacific slope sections for improvement in breeding, and Western Canada is admirably suited for raising stock. It is generally recognized that increase in live stock in future years must bring an improvement of the present breeding stock. The west was looked upon as the base of future supply for the eastern breeders. The live stock industry in the west was never better than it is to-day. A recent official report issued by the Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Saskatchewan by the Secretary of the Provincial Livestock Board shows that returns were never more satisfactory. The value of the live stock in Saskatchewan is estimated at $173,207,848, and these returns deal with conditions only up to April 30th last. There has been a great increase since that date as farmers realizing the value of mixed farming have taken to raising stock. They find that the straw from the wheat can be utilized as a cattle feed in the winter time, consequently there are not so many straw fires to be seen burning in the extensive wheat fields along the C. P. R. as in former years. In Alberta the other week a carload of 20 three-year-old Aberdeen Angus steers was sold at Calgary to a Chicago firm at 12 cents a pound, or a total of $3,427.20. Their average weight was 1,428 pounds. Recently one of the largest single cattle deals in Canada was closed in Edmonton, consisting of the purchase of 2,500 head of choice beef steers, weighing not less than 1,350 pounds each, the sum involved in the transaction being between $300,000 and $325,000, and will require 140 C. P. R. cars to transport the animals to their destination. Summer feed is cheaply raised in great abundance.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases. Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B. B. B."

THE MOTHS HAD A KEY TO THE TRUNK

Got After Mrs. Bindle's Wearing Apparel and Shot it Full of Holes.

"I wonder whether I must wear that last winter's coat again this season?" mused Bindle as he dragged the trunk out of the closet and into the light of day.

"I'm afraid you will," exclaimed Mrs. Bindle. "That's a perfectly good coat. I don't remember seeing you in one that looked nicer on you. It always had such stylish lines. It made you look so boyish, don't you know?"

"No, I don't know," replied Bindle sadly. "I had my eye on one of those new fashioned military effects—with the belt attached and all that."

"Why, my dear!" said Mrs. Bindle. "A man in civil life has no excuse for trying to look like a drum major. If he wants a military cut there is just one place to do it."

"I get you," said Bindle. "And if I have to wear that last year's overcoat, again I'd just as soon join the army—a whole lot sooner."

Bindle raised the lid of the trunk and fell back in astonishment.

"Look! Wife, come quick!" he shouted. "Ah, here is some of your efficiency for you! Gaze downward at this thriving moth village in our little trunk of winter things. How did it happen?"

"Don't know. Can't see how a moth got in—the trunk was locked."

"One of 'em had a key, I suppose," said Bindle. "Didn't I tell you to put some tobacco in the trunk for the moths?"

"Yes, dear, but I wasn't sure of the kind of tobacco they liked. You didn't say whether smoking or chewing."

"There you are," said Bindle, bringing forth a near seal coat of his wife's from the depths. "Your best garment shot full of holes. I figured that coat would last you for the next seven years. That's what you said when you bought it." "But there is a new style on the market this year! I'm just as well pleased that the moths made merry with this one. I really want a coat of the new aviatrix models."

Each time that Bindle came up for air he brought something else that the moths had feasted on. Mrs. Bindle's two winter suits were peek-a-boos. Her sweater jackets and sport coats were reduced to skeletonized form. The last thing to come out of the ill-fated trunk was Bindle's last winter's overcoat. He held it up—perfect.

"Thank goodness for that!" cried Mrs. Bindle. "I'm so sorry it was my things those awful moths ate instead of yours, Meredith. I'll have to get an entire outfit and you, lucky boy, can wear the coat another season."
