

WOMAN FIGHT MANAGER HAS THREE IN STABLE

Detroit, March 18—From the domestic arena to the prize-fight pit is but a traisition of activity for women, in this new dispensation era, and the apostle of the Coming Day is a married woman, fight manager and pug boss.

She is Mrs. Edna Greiner, and she has started her rise to a height that may transcend even the dreams of Tex Rickard, with a stable of three young clouters of agility, punch and intelligence. They are named, for professional purposes, Johnny Clancy, Frankie Mack and Pete Baert, and they say she picked the monikers her own self, after due consideration of psychological effect.

She is the one and only woman manager of prize-fighters as far as is known or revealed, and she runs her gym and training quarters with army discipline. Her lads are clean, mustn't even have profane thought, much less a word; go to bed at bedtime, eat when she gives them, improve their minds by proper reading, and each has the ambition, fostered by their owner, of serving money education in some special field.

"My boxers" she says "are doing very well. They have appeared before some of the smaller clubs and are working their way to larger things. I do not go into the corner with them, but I always have a ringside seat.

"I watch them closely. I watch them work in my gymnasium and see that there is no shirking. I insist that they behave like gentlemen always, get their proper sleep, observe training rules religiously and eat when they should. I prepare their meals, too."

Mrs. Greiner is building fame as a square shooter, is astute as they come has everything in writing and underwritten, plays safe and doesn't bet. She says that women are taking more and more interest in boxing matches, and it is only a question of time when many women will own and manage stables of fighters. "We women will tune up the game" she declares.

MANY SPUDS ARE GOING OUT OF AROOSTOOK

Caribou, Mel, March 18—Week-end shipments of Aroostook potatoes were heavy, about 260 carloads going out of the country, and the market opened firm today with buyers offering from 80 cents to $1 a barrel, according to quality and shipping points. The growers, however, made light offerings today, due in some places to bad roads and the somewhat encouraging tone of the market. Some expect the price to touch $1.25 at least, if the market is not glutted.

BOSTON BRUINS WON FIRST OF PLAYOFFS BETWEEN TWO LEADERS

Blanked Canadiens by 1-0 Score at Hub City—
Bruins Use Defensive Style Following Lead
—Toronto Beat Detroit 3 to 1—New York Teams Tie.

Boston, March 19—The Boston Bruins, champions of the American division of the National Hockey League, obtained the jump on Les Canadiens, the International section's title holders, by smashing out a 1 to 0 victory here tonight in the first game of the Stanley Cup play-off. Though both teams appeared equally matched and displayed almost the same aggressiveness, the Bruins were able to take advantage of the only break of the game, which came in the opening period. The clash was less than eight minutes old when Weiland, the Bruin's second string centre, took a pass from Capt. Lionel Hitchman to beat Hainsworth.

Half-way through the second session the Flying Frenchmen had almost the same scoring chance. Morenz and Patterson broke through and Tiny Thompson stopped the former's shot. Patterson played the rebound and the Boston goalie came out to make the stop. Mondou swept in and caged the rubber while Thompson was outside, but Referee Smeaton ruled that Morenz was offside and the tally was ruled out.

During the final period the Bruins were intent on nursing their slim lead to the end and played a five-man defence most of the time.

Th game was a sell out, over 15,000 people attending.

HIS WINTER JOURNEY ALL IN HIS GOOD EYE

(New York Sun)
The Man-Across-the-Hall glanced curiously at his neighbor's great pile of mail.

"You must be on the lists of a lot of stock promoters," he remarked. "No," said Neighbor, "these are travel circulars. I'm taking a trip through Africa this winter.

"Really!" cried the Man-Across-the-Hall enviously, "When?" "I'm half way through already," said Neighbor.

"What-at?" puzzled the Man-Across-the-Hall.

Neighbor grinned. It's this way," he explained. "You don't have to travel and a few years ago I figured out a way to go without leaving town.

"What I do," he went on with the satisfaction of a man who knows he is possessed of a bright idea, "is decide on my trip and then send for travel circulars. I get loads. Then I make a map of my itinerary and read books from the library to fill in the chinks." He grinned again. "It mayn't sound sensible," he conceded, "but you'd be surprised at the fun I have."

The Man-Across-the-Hall pondered a bit. It sounds sensible to me," he cried. He pondered half a moment more and then slapped his knee. "It sounds downright sensible," he emphasized. "Say! How about taking me along?"

CHICKS HATCHED BY THE MILLION IN CALIFORNIA

(Philadelphia Ledger)
Seventy-five thousand new chicks every twenty-four hours—1,800,000 every three weeks—that is raising chickens wholesale.

The output of Leo Burke's California hatchery is nearly twice the capacity of any other machine-hatching plant in the world. The plant cost $500,000.

Burke's venture is not a sudden plunge of an overly enthusiastic promoter. He started hatching chicks on a large scale ten years ago and has "grown up" with the business.

This first hatchery turned out 100,000 chicks every three weeks, an undreamed-of capacity at that time. By 1929 he had enlarged his plant to 400,000 chicks. Then a fire destroyed it. He rebuilt on a scale of 600,000 chicks, and in less than four years his output has grown to three times that.

The Burke hatchery has 3780 incubators placed end to end down ten long aisles, with 180,000 eggs in every aisle. Every day during the hatching season 100,000 new eggs are placed in the machines. These hatch out an average of 75,000 chicks three weeks later, and Burke knows how to count his chicks before they are hatched.

It takes all the eggs from 225,000 hens to keep this hatchery going. Most of the eggs are from White Leghorn stock bred up for egg production.

Everything around the plant, says Capper's Weekly, is carried out with machine-like precision. Nothing is left to chance. The eggs were turned every twenty minutes by helpers who work in shifts day and night.

Electricity supplies the heat. It is brought into the plant over 4000-volt wires and is "stepped down" to meet hatching needs. More electricity is used by Burke's big hatchery than by any of the large manufacturing plants in and around San Francisco.

Sporting Splashes

Why Wait

Well the National Hockey League playoffs are underway. The results of last night's game are not indicative of any choice of teams. The series has just started!

Basketball

Mount Allison and the St. John Trojans are for it in the provincial senior basketball playoffs, so it appears. And both have strong aggregations of hoopsters. The playoff will commence in the near future, probably the latter part of the present week.

Just As Good

It will be of interest to followers of interscholastic sports, and basketball in particular to learn that the young St. John basketball quintet have captured the New Brunswick basketball championship for the present year. Plans are already being made for Maritime Playoffs.

Cold Weather. Brr!

The coming of fine, warm weather, with its resultant bare sidewalks, and ozone heating propensities, has placed a stopper on hockey hereabouts for the time being. The final activities in local hockey and ice circles will probably be concluded within the next ten days. It is doubtful if the ice at the Arctic lasts that long, on account of the softening processes of nature. It is also doubtful if there is any regret over the passing of winter's term with its blustery winds, and its accompanying colds, coughs, etc.
