The Latest in Sleeping Cars The "Chambrette"

THE latest development in sleeping cars is the "Chambrette" or single room compartment cars. This type of car was first introduced in Canada by the Canadian National Railways and it is proving very popular. The "Chambrette" is similar to the regular compartment cars but contains a single bed and the space is somewhat smaller with a corresponding lower rate. They provide a very inexpensive mode of comfortable travel.

THE BIBLICAL CITY OF ZION HAS BEEN UNCOVERED AFTER SIXTY YEARS OF HARD LABOR

Jerusalem, Jan. 4—Sixty years labor at Mount Ophel has laid bare to-day the Biblical City of Zion, "the fair place," which inspired King David to some of the greatest passages in Old Testament literature.

Revelation that Ophel and the famous citadel captured by the armies of the "Giant Killer" 3,000 years ago are identical has indicated the literal accuracy of ancient Israelite historians and solved one of the chief problems of Biblical topography, leaders of the Palestine Exploration Fund Expedition assert.

Sir George Adam Smith now considers that the Whale Back Rock bounded by the Kidron and Tyropaeon Valleys is the "City of David" about which there has been continual controversy and other modern experts agree with him. The explorations, started in 1867, were temporarily abandoned and renewed five years ago.

David, the delicate, ambitious youth who followed the armies of King Saul against the Philistines, who killed the giant Goliath and who rose to rulership over Israel, made the City of Zion outstanding in his kingdom. Probably this was because of his difficulty in capturing the Jebusite City. "Except thou take away the blind and lame thou shalt not come in hither," cried the defenders of the city to David, taunting the Israelite armies from the impregnable walls, which they believed even the lame and blind could defend against an army.

Encouraged Army.

"Whosoever goeth up by the water course and smiteth the Jebusites—and the lame and the blind that are hated of David's soul, he shall be the chief and the captain," King David announced to his discouraged armies.

"So Joab went up first, and was chief . . . David took the stronghold of Zion and dwelt in the castle; wherefore they called it the City of David," the story continues, telling the success of Joab in defending his right to leadership of the armies against the King's offer to replace him by the man who first entered the city.

The water course was difficult and treacherous, leading through a cave and up into the city at the well where the besieged population drew water. Joab led his picked soldiers into the city and opened the gates to the army.

In later years the citadel was replaced by Solomon, Hezekiah and perhaps Nehemiah, scientists said, but the historian Josephus recorded that Simon Maccabaeus swept the surface of the citadel because it towered above and threatened the temple.

One wall of this citadel or fort which was standing when David's armies captured it about 1000 B. C., is part of the city uncovered. Excavators have been able to fit in the details of Nehemiah's description and to locate the various other outstanding points of topography in the City of David.

Best of Masonry.

Midway between two bastions the older Tower of David has been uncovered—Hebrew masonry of the best and earliest period. Spiral bastions of more than 23 feet in depth—probably the stairway leading to the water gate Nehemiah described—have been revealed.

"We can picture in our mind's eye what a magnificent sight this tower of David's time must have presented," said the Rev. J. Garraw Duncan, formerly in charge of the excavations.

"We find a large and conspicuous rampart," said Prof. R. A. S. MacAlister, director of the present expedition, "and it is reasonable to identify this with the fortification of David. It is a blockade erected to stop a great breach in the outer wall."

BERLIN PERKING UP DURING RECENT YEARS

For those who, enjoying joviality, recall the gaiety of pre-war Berlin, and have compared it sorrowfully with the gloom of the immediate post-war period, a visit to the Berlin of the present is recommended, says the living age.

True, Berlin is still a poor city, statistically speaking with low workmen's wages and high prices for food and clothing. But who cares for statistics, when luxuries abound everywhere for anyone willing to pay the price, and choice wines and epicurean fare seem not only within the reach of most restaurant patrons, but actually are enjoyed by many of Teutonic tongue and countenance, whose bank accounts must be ample to make possible such expenditure?

Perhaps the Germans have changed their point of view, and now believe that the joys of the moment are of more importance than boarding for a time when pleasure will be restrained by the limitation of old age. At all events, Berlin's cafes are now filled, her movies and theatres are well patronized, and a spirit of optimism and cheer is all-pervading.

New places of amusement, some of them elaborate, are being constantly added. Even the servant girls are bobbing their hair, a fashion somehow connected with levity of spirit, and silk stockings, worn by trim, comely and smiling domestics, are in evidence on holidays.

Berlin is noticeable "perking up," and, though a housing shortage is complained of in the newspapers, the visitor in any one of a number of excellent hotels is altogether unconscious of the lack of dwellings for the bourgeoisie, and, for variety of entertainment and opportunities for money spending, need not envy the sojourners in any other capital of Europe.

Possibly it was that old school reader line, "I like to see a little dog and pat him on the head," that makes some men dislike being slapped on the back.

DIPHTHERIA OUTBREAK AT FT. VERMILLION

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 5—The lives of 200 people in the little northern village of Fort Vermillion depends on the speed of an airplane which is scheduled to leave Winnipeg early this morning loaded with anti-toxin to quell the ravages of diphtheria in the northern community. Fort Vermillion is 300 miles north of Edmonton in the midst of unsettled country in the Alberta hinterland.

Diphtheria broke out there several days ago and already there are 200 cases, while there has been one death. Anti-toxin was not to be had and an SOS call was sent to Edmonton. A moth plane with a small supply left Edmonton for the northland on Wednesday afternoon, got as far as McLellands crossing in the Peace River country and continued northward but has not been heard from since Thursday morning. It is feared it is lost.

A second call was received on Friday night by Western Canada Airways in Winnipeg. The anti-toxin was secured and early Saturday morning a super-Fokker plane of the largest and most powerful type will leave in charge of Aviator Frank Westergaard, one of the Western Canada Airways' most competent airmen. He will fly the plane to Edmonton where he will hand over to the famous Punch Dickens, who knows the north country like a book, and who will continue the journey. The plane has a speed of 125 miles an hour and the company hopes to deliver the much-wanted serum by Saturday night. This is the third case where the airplane has been called upon to such emergency relief into the hinterland of the Canadian North. The two previous attempts were carried out without accident and it is hoped this one will as well.

From numerous inquiries made among young women with reference to mistolete it is now possible to give their unanimous opinion in tabloid form as follows: "Huh!"
