Going Upstairs Had to Sit Down Breath So Short

Mrs. H. Brousseau, Magog, Que., writes:—"For many years I suffered with shortness of breath; then four years ago I had palpitation of the heart, and was so bad I had to sit down two or three times when going upstairs. I read about so I got a box, and in no time I felt better, so I took three boxes more and I have never had shortness of breath since."

WOMEN'S COLUMN

NEW YORK STYLES

Whether coats have belts or not depends largely on the length of the coat. Jackets seldom have belts, while the longer coats, especially the three-quarter length garments, usually have them. The longer coats usually are of rough tweeds diagonally lined. Some of the coats have pockets and some have not. This is true also of the woolen skirts, but the blouses which are important parts of modern costumes, usually have them set high.

Hips are still closely swathed, and hip yokes are so numerous as to be almost the rule, instead of the exception. Length of skirts is about the same with a caught-up movement in front. Some of the materials have remarkable and beautiful color combinations of design. For example, a beige check is printed on a flamingo-colored chiffon with a dark brown back-ground.

There is no mistaking the vogue for pajamas nor of the vogue for the wide-footed type. Many are made almost on the sailor's designs with snug fitting hips and very wide foot. Many of the tunics are sleeveless and most of them are short.

One can hardly imagine Cleopatra in a small hat, but it is evident that some of the smart milliners have been to Egypt. The Egyptian head-dress made familiar on scores of tombs and monuments has resulted in the production of hats with brim on the sides only. This type is most becoming to some profiles, but the women who have not Egyptian profiles will still stick to the hats with brims in front and rear, as well as on the sides.

Spring hats are gayer than those of former years. Of course one brilliantly colored headpiece is always more noticeable than six somber-hued hats, but the smartly dressed women seem to be picking out straws in the Panama and near Panama style range and found in colorings which range from green and red to a new golden orange. Many of the brief brims are folded at irregular intervals around the head.

There are two distinctive types of evening frocks now being exploited. One is decidedly of the "princess" type. It has a square décollete with narrow straps over the shoulder. It is form-fitting, the mousseline and chiffon materials being shirred to the body. Even in the front they are long and they almost touch the floor in the back. If there can be said to be a waist line, it is high. The other type has tight fitting shirt bodices with the skirts flared by means of flounces. One such skirt of white has three super-imposed flounces, the middle one of which is edged with sable. This is the only fur on the dress.

Acid in Stomach Ruins Appetite

Thin, pale people—the despondent sort who never have an appetite, and complain of headaches, indigestion, dizziness, biliousness, usually have too much acid in their stomach. And unless they displace it, any food they eat turns into sour bile and foul gases, which poison their system.

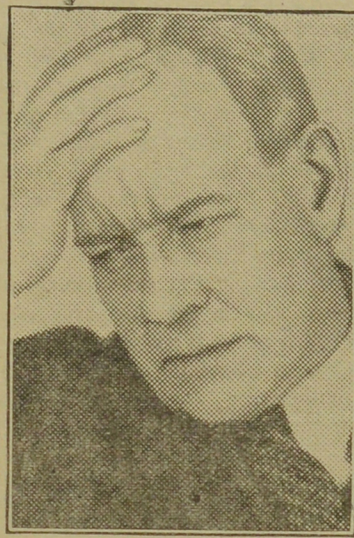

Pape's Diapepsin dissolves that poisonous acid, sweetens the stomach and digests your meals. Many thousands of people have brought back the appetite of their youth and gained weight simply by chewing one of the pleasant tablets of Pape's Diapepsin after meals.

It does what it promises. That's the reason 5 million packages are used a year—ask your nearest druggist for it.
