MAN WHO WON'T RETIRE

Thomas Edison has again let it be known that he is going to continue at work. His unique way of saying so: "No, I'll never retire. It's unhealthy." It is characteristic of great men who have accomplished a great deal are the least disposed to retire. "Taking it easy" has no meaning to them. Mr. Edison is trying to find a boy who may develop into a successor, but the great genius himself is going forward to the time when it will be physically impossible to proceed further.

Much has been written recently of England's great editor, C. P. Scott. For fifty-seven years he has edited the Manchester Guardian. He is 82 now. He has "retired" in this way—yielded the editorship of his newspaper to his son, but he still remains managing director.

There is admirable sportsmanship in the spirit of these men and all men who, under the rules of the game, could step down gracefully but persist in carrying on, to add something more to their accumulation of achievements. When a man has worked half a century it is customary to say he has "earned a rest." But what he has really earned is the right to stay on the job. The consciousness of still being useful is doubtless more gratifying to him than what others call "rest."

It used to be said that the English are not only very slow to see the point of a joke but slow to move. It has been fairly well demonstrated during the past few months that Englishmen can be pretty swift at times. In the auto race at Dayton Beach a few months ago Major Seagrave, an Englishman, broke all speed records on land. Only a few days ago Lieut. Arlebar, another Englishman, reeled off 357.7 miles an hour in an airplane. Both records are likely to stand until broken by some other Englishman.

Moncton Times: Mr. Vroom, Secretary of the New Brunswick Temperance Alliance, says he is working for the overthrow of the present Premier of the province because of his enactment of the Liquor Control Act. But Mr. Vroom probably would be working just as hard for Premier Baxter's overthrow had there never been a Liquor Control Act.

While the wet weather this week has been highly beneficial as a whole it is not conducive to the success of the Fredericton exhibition. It will be likely to interfere with the attendance from outside points, and if it is to be a financial success it will be up to local people to give it a generous patronage.

The chap who says the average man walks three miles an hour must hunt up his statistics in queer places. The average man doesn't walk three miles a day.

If he's six or eight thousand miles from the scene of the massacre, the rocking chair commentator will refer to it in his learned article as an "affair."

"The first sound transmitted by Bell's original telephone was sent a distance of only 20 feet." Charley, the family wisecracker, claims it was a close call.

Three politicians by the name of Curley have announced their candidacies for Mayor of Boston. Almost enough for a Curley queue.

Temporize: To trim one's convictions for purposes of expediency: Giving the lazy youth a glowing letter of recommendation to get him out of the organization.

"This self extinguishing cigaret is not really new," says a much traveled friend. "Have you ever tried to keep a pipe going in England in April?"

Our observation is that the advertisements are the cleanest reading in the magazine. They haven't yet gone in very strong for sex psychology.

It is not raining rain to me. Neither is it raining daffodils, roses or violets. It isn't raining anything at all. This is dry weather, and no fooling.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Why is it that we have to import the raw material for the hot dogs from the United States?

Simile: As hard to push as the revolving door at the Post Office.

Happy the man who can say in all truth that his job keeps him young.

Closed cars make it easy to cuss the other fellow for his traffic discourtesies without his hearing.

Those who survive a holiday must carry on, contemplating the next. Here is nothing else to do.

Lima Beane says the easiest thing in life is to give advice and let the fellow who takes it run all risks.

Trying to find virtues where there is ingratitude is something like searching for a needle in a haystack.

An astrologer predicts a long, hard winter, but we're waiting for the goosebump to tell us what kind of winter we're going to have.

"Yes, my dear" is a three-word phrase that, when used by man, is exploited as a peace preservative. Still, it presents opportunity for irony.

In the paper before us there is a paragraph which tells of a judge who has ruled that a man is the head of the house. Hope it isn't contempt of court to tee-hee.

A doctor says that one of the reasons for the prevalence of divorce is that we are not getting enough Limes." Hi Sloocum says that the trouble is as he figures it, because of too many lemons.

Western Visitors

Mrs. (Dr.) E. E. Lane of Aberdeen, Washington, arrived in the city this week and is a guest of Mr. James M. Scott, M. L. A., for York. Mrs. Lane who was formerly Miss Catherine Graham, of Prince William is a daughter of the late W. W. Graham for many years a member of the York County Council and a sister of Mrs. Scott. She went west twenty-eight years ago after graduating from the Provincial Normal School and located at Aberdeen, Washington, where she has since made her home. This is her first return to the east and she is being heartily welcomed by many old friends. Her son who accompanies her is on his way to Boston to enter the School of Finance for a course of instruction.

Here on Fishing Trip

Mr. Robert A. Shailer of New York, consulting engineer for the Interboro Rapid Transit Company arrived in the city today and is a guest at the Barker House. Mr. Shailer visited here last September and enjoyed some fine sport fishing salmon on the Miramichi under the guidance of Mr. Raymond Currie of this city. He returned in July of this year and fished the Hart's Island Pool with success. He is now here for another try at salmon and when the season closes will accompany Mr. Currie on a duck shooting expedition.

Was Rounded Up

A man who had gone insane at Three Islands on the Little Southwest Miramichi this week was promptly rounded up by the provincial police and is now in the provincial hospital. He had taken refuge in a camp in the woods and threatened to kill all who molested him. The police by employing strategy surrounded the fellow, threw him to the ground and applied the bracelets. Two loaded revolvers and a gun were found in the camp and confiscated.

WEST INDIES ISLE IS BIRDS' PARADISE

Tobago, West Indies, Sept. 18—The island of Little Tobago, 11 miles from this port, has become the only bird paradise in the world. This small island of less than 500 acres attracted the attention some years ago of Sir William Ingham, former proprietor of the London Illustrated News.

He conceived the idea of making it a paradise for birds of every size and description and imported a large number of birds of paradise which have thrived and multiplied in their new surroundings.

On the death of Sir William the island went to Lady Ingham for life. On her death in October, 1925, Sir Herbert Ingham and Mr. Bruce Ingham came into the property. Later they expressed the wish to convey the island to the King and to rename it Ingham island. The Government of Tobago and Trinidad arranged to provide for and preserve the birds. Food and water have since been carried regularly to the island. The birds are increasing in numbers rapidly.

No matter how fierce the struggle to keep in style you can depend upon a modern woman to fight to the last stitch.

Somebody is forever making genius unpopular by associating it with hard work.
