CUB PLAYERS COST WRIGLEY SUM OF $400,000

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Taking the rubber band off the wallet has been one of the things the Cub management has done with alacrity, but this year's National League champions do not represent more than $400,000 in hard cash.

Rogers Hornsby was a fancy addition at $240,000, considering the cash value of players involved. The Cubs bought him from Boston.

On the other hand, Guy Bush, the hurling ace, was a bargain—$1,200, and Hack Wilson, the pugnacious one, was almost a gift, $5,000. Pat Malone, who moved his suit case from Minneapolis, cost $30,000, and Bill Veeck laid down $30,000 to the American Association for Woody English, Collegiate-looking shortstop.

Norman McMillan, the hot corner inhabitant came from the Association for $5,000, and Los Angeles and Portland received $10,000 for Charlie Root and Sheriff Blake. Art Nehf as a bargain buy, but Hal Carlson cost $30,000, including the players, that went to Philadelphia in the deal.

Veeck gave Indianapolis $12,000 for Riggs Stephenson, and Kiki Cuyler set the bank balance back $20,000.

Cliff Heathcote cost nothing, as he was traded for Max Flack, and Flack was the property of the Federal League club, which the Cub management bought. Heathcote came from St. Louis. Gonzales and Taylor, the catchers, were Christmas presents from St. Louis and Boston.

Charley Grimm has been worth many times the $35,000 that the Cubs gave Pittsburgh for him.

The Wilson trade was a David Harum deal, and can be credited to Joe McCarthy, the manager. Hack had been tried by McGraw, and shipped to Toledo, with an option in the New York office. Through a clerical error the Giants failed to exercise their option within the time limit. McCarthy, managing Louisville, but under contract to the Cubs for the next year, notified Veeck, and Wilson was picked up for the draft price, $5,000.

Had the Cubs not been near the bottom that year some other club would have had first choice of Wilson.

THESE SAVANTS
By MAHONRI YOUNG
(Fox Movietone Sculptor)

I have just finished a commission at Fox Movietone city making plaster models of a group of famous historical personages to be used in a forthcoming picture, "Seven Faces." In the picture the plaster figures, Napoleon, Mozart, Beethoven, Sengul and others, come to life and speak their minds. It is very interesting in the picture, but it would have been much more so—the coming to life, I mean—if it had taken place one day while I was showing a group of girl studio tourists around my plaster shop.

I was working on a cast of Joe Gans, famous Negro prizefighter of the last generation. The body was shaped up in Gans' boxing crouch but I had not yet added arms. As the figure was unfinished, I took my visitors to see the other figures first.

Eventually the visitors espied the Gans figure. One of them nudged the other and cried:

"Oh look, Mabel, it's the Venus de Milo."

I think that would have elicited interesting comment both from the dusky pugilist and the beautiful lady.

VETERAN DIES

Altoona, La., Oct. 1.—John P. Goch-naur, old-time major league baseball player, is dead at his home here. Gochnaur played shortstop for Brooklyn National League club in 1899.

RAN DEAD HEAT

Newbury, England, Oct. 1.—J. Murphy's five-year-old Orkney and Lady Ludlow's four-year-old Show Girl ran a dead heat in the Newbury Autumn Cup Saturday afternoon. Hepeta, four lengths back, finished third. Six ran. The betting was five to two against Old Orkney, six to one against Show Girl and seven to four against Hepeta. The distance of the race was two miles and a furlong, the race being a feature of the late season handicaps.

DAVIDS LOST

Montreal, Oct. 1.—On account of the unsettled weather the schedule between members of the Royals and Dave Major's Stars yesterday at the Stadium was cancelled. On Saturday Major's team defeated the House of David nine by 5-4. The second contest was called in the tenth inning on account of darkness.

DENIED TRADE

Pittsburgh, Oct. 1.—Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, issued a statement yesterday denying reports that Paul Waner is to be traded to the St. Louis Cardinals for Sunny Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman.

WILL MAKE SURVEY ON THE RESTIGOUCHE

Campbellton, Sept. 30.—A. E. Hanson, of Fredericton, Crown land surveyor, who arrived in Campbellton last Friday night, left this afternoon with a crew of six men for the Pata-pedia pools on the Restigouche river. It is understood that a survey of the river lost adjoining the famous "Mil-lion Dollar Pool," owned by the Res-tigouche Salmon Club, who have re-quested that the work be carried out in order to establish the true lines of their property.

When this is complete, Mr. Hanson will make a further survey of land known as Long Island, also on the river, which is owned by the lower Restigouche Club, H. R. McClellan, Thomas Warren and others. It is ex-pected these surveys will take a week or ten days to complete.

HONEYMOON COUPLES MADE USE OF PLANES

San Francisco, Oct. 1.—What has become of the old-time honeymoon couple who took in the city in a "rubberneck" wagon with a guide bellowing through his megaphone?

Aviation believes it has found the answer. Instead of the lumbering and conspicuous automobiles air-planes are used for excursions on a several hour trip.

A Western company makes two daily trips from here to three na-tional parks and Lake Tahoe, all within a radius of 1,000 miles. A uni-formed courier quietly explains and points out landmarks on the terrain below the speeding airplane. The sightseeing busses of the air usually carry capacity loads.

LECTURES HIM THEN FINDS HE IS DEAF

Chicago, Oct. 1.—The court crier sang out his famous "Hear ye, Hear ye," but it didn't mean a thing to Ralph McCluskey.

McCluskey was up for disorderly conduct and Judge Joseph Schulman fined him $25. To further impress the defendant with the lowness of disorderliness, Judge Schulman delivered a severe oral reprimand. He laid it on heavy.

The defendant paid no attention. He gazed abstractedly about the courtroom, and when finally the court's denunciation had ended Mc-Cluskey strolled out.

"That fellow didn't pay attention to a word I said," Judge Schulman re-marked to his bailiff.

"Couldn't," replied the bailiff "He's totally deaf."

A ROAD HOG BITES DRIVER CAUSING CRASH

Highland, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Frank Aur-go Jr., twelve years old, suffered seri-ous injuries today in an automobile accident caused literally by a road hog. The term "road hog" usually is applied insultingly to motorists oc-cupying most of the available road space with their vehicles.

Frank Turco sr. was taking a hog from his home at Glasco to High-land. Young Frank accompanied him. The hog, in a crate in the tonneau, stuck his snout through the boards and nibbled Mr. Turco's back. Mr. Turco, frightened, lost control of the car which overturned in a ditch. Young Frank suffered a fractured pel-vis.

SUNDAY NOT LIKELY TO BE ABOLISHED

A century and a half ago the French tried to abolish Sunday just as the Russians are trying to do now. Their failure is so complete that it is strange that even the Russians should have failed to preceive the point.

The fact is, Sunday can never be abolished by governmental decree. There is no real menace to the day in what goes on in legislative halls, or in the street, or in the markets, or anywhere else outside the church-er. If there is a threat to Christian Sabbath, it is to be found within not without, the sanctuary. Governments can try their best to convert it into a day of labor, but as long as the churches maintain it as a day of religious observance, a day of religious observance it will remain.

Only when the churches them-selves convert it into an occasion to rtelhe discussion of political, or so-ciological, or economic questions is there danger that the day will lose its religious significance.

Suppose it does take a whole cantaloupe, as one doctor says, to yield 100 calories of food? Nobody eats cantaloupe for calories.
