Only Two Candidates Are Likely to be Unopposed

Intensity of the Campaign Shown by the Presence of 1,718 Candidates in the Field—Election May Result in a Stalemate and For This Premier Baldwin and Ramsay MacDonald Are Blaming Lloyd George.

(By HERBERT BAILEY, British United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, May 13—The intensity of the British election campaign is indicated by the presence in the field of 1,718 candidates and the fact that there are only two seats where the late member is likely to be returned unopposed.

Captain E. A. Fitzroy, Commons speaker at Daventry, and Commodore Douglas King, of the Mines Department, at South Paddington are without opponents, though the latter may be opposed by Labor.

May Be a Stalemate.

Both Premier Baldwin and Ramsay MacDonald fear that such a huge number of candidates is going to lead to a stalemate in the election, a situation for which they blame Lloyd George. They are both asking the electorate to give either party a clear majority because of the necessity for a stable government and the avoidance of another election, and this appeal coming as it does from both leaders, may have an important effect on the electorate and undermine Lloyd George's chances.

(Special Cable to THE DAILY MAIL by the British United Press.)

Another fund of 3,000,000 kroners for the direct support of private debtors and a third fund of 5,000,000 kroners ($1,333,000) to be used for the same purpose to whatever extent may be necessary also were proposed.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN TOWN OF PUGWASH

Pugwash, N. S., May 12—The third disastrous fire to visit this small town within two years laid waste the best residential section early this morning, destroying thirty-five structures, including fifteen residences, two churches, one small hotel, a tan factory, barns and smaller buildings. The loss was estimated at $125,000.

No lives were lost, but several persons sustained injuries.

The Anglican church and the Roman Catholic church, each valued at $15,000 and the Minto hotel, $10,000 were the largest buildings destroyed. The houses were worth from $3,000 to $10,000. The tan factory valued at $5,000 was unoccupied.

The heroism of Miss Margaret Chapman, telephone operator, who remained at her switchboard until the last moment, plugging in all the numbers on the board, was believed to have averted a greater tragedy. Many persons barely escaped, some jumping to the ground from upper windows.

WOULD PRESERVE THE BEAUTY OF COUNTRYSIDE

(Special Cable to THE DAILY MAIL by the British United Press.)

London, May 13—The Archbishop of Canterbury made a fervent plea for the preservation of the beauty of the English countryside yesterday urging local authorities throughout the country to co-operate in an effort to check the growing unsightliness, "at every point we turn", the Archbishop said, "we find, instead of rural charm, gas-line stations to kiosks, bill boards and unsightly bungalows".

New Yorker is accused of trying to saw off one of his wife's legs, and he'll probably advance the defense that it was the bowed one.

REV. J. G. BERRY PREACHED TO U. N. B. STUDENTS

Pastor of St. Andrew's Delivered the Baccalaureate Sermon Before a Large Congregation.

The annual encaenia exercises of the University of New Brunswick began yesterday with the baccalaureate sermon delivered at the morning service of St. Andrews Church by the pastor Rev. J. G. Berry, M. A., B. D. The members of the faculty and students attended in a body, and representatives of the senate, Alumni Society and Alumnae Society were also present. The splendid new church was crowded to capacity. An appropriate musical program was carried out by the choir.

Rev. Mr. Berry delivered an able scholarly and appropriate sermon from Hebrews 11:39:

"And these all having won their record of faith received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us that apart from us they should not be made perfect."

The Epistle to the Hebrews, said the preacher, was a wonderful book in spite of the fact that its author was unknown. His identity had slipped out of sight. The work represented the advice given to a small and hard pressed church of Christians in the first century. The writer took the opportunity of recounting the glorious history of the Hebrew race and to point out the accomplishments wrought by faith as shown in the great portraits of its historic personages.

A Great Lesson

In this he gave a profound explanation of what Christian faith and hope really mean. In the ancient Hebrew leaders, faith was something which was bound up with their lives and their conduct from day to day. Their faith was an activity of the soul put forth on tasks and problems of their lives in the world which led them to have the consciousness that God was supporting them and that their lives were bound to Him by a wonderful bond. This display of faith was a great lesson, especially for the youth of today. In the confusion of the modern world, amid the cry and the claims of science and religion and the contentions of the churches, a mark of everlasting light could be set up in the way of obedience and duty.

Another thought from that portion of Hebrew history was that these men were working in God's purpose. They looked forward to their hopes but they did not always see them fulfilled.

Again, the book contained the reference to the great cloud of witnesses seeming to refer to the dead who gathered about the course and encouraged the living who are running the race. Human life must be a hard race and a stout battle and for those who endure is the comradeship of Christ.

To the graduating class in particular the preacher said that they, about to go out to the great adventure of life, must take the inspiration of Jesus Christ. They must give heed to the insistent call for service. It could not be the aim of those in the world's battle to seek their ends or to make success the only goal. The real need of the world and of one's fellows must be answered and met.

MRS. PHILLIP MITTELL WELL KNOWN HERE DIES IN NEW YORK

The Deceased Was a Summer Visitor to Davidson Lake, Parish of Dumfries, for Many Years.

Mr. F. B. Edgecombe this morning received a telegram from Prof. Phillip Mittell of New York announcing the death of his wife, who was well known as a summer visitor to this city and in the upper section of York County. About twenty-five years ago Prof. Mittell established a summer camp at Davidson Lake in the Parish of Dumfries and with his wife and family and friends were annual visitors to the place up to quite recently when he disposed of property. A large party of boys were usually their guests during the summer months and lived things up in the neighborhood. Both Prof. and Mrs. Mittell were expert musicians and their camp equipment included a piano, a tennis court and a baseball field. Being an expert angler the professor spent much of his spare time whipping the waters of Davidson Lake and the Pokiock River for trout and with much success. Mrs. Mittell managed the business of the camps with great success and made many friends here who will learn of her death with deep regret. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn her death, one son, Tehyr Mittell, and a daughter Mrs. Sybella Webber, both of New York. The sincere sympathy of New Brunswick friends will go out to the family in their bereavement.

Situation Relieved

Though forest fires were reported to the department of Lands and Mines here on Sunday, the heavy rainfall of Sunday morning aided wonderfully in relieving the situation. The rainfall was general in the province, Campbellton being about the only place which did not receive any fires mere reported on the Elgin sub-division of the C. N. R. in Albert county on Back Creek and near McGivney Junction. Slash burning was attributed as the cause. The acreage burned was estimated as 145 acres. Reports today to G. L. Miller, chief provincial forester are that all fires are now out. The heavy wind of today will again be favorable to forest fires as it is drying up the woodlands rapidly. The forest patrols are in preparation for any further outbreaks.

After a research of the subject covering a long period of years, we conclude that the word used oftentimes in irony is as follows: "Alas!"

A Great Broadcast

Radio fans of the owl type who listened in late Saturday night heard a program broadcast from Station KDKA of Pittsburgh to Commander Byrd's expedition in the Antarctic. A code message from members of the expedition was heard on the air and was read after having been deciphered. For a wind up, station KDKA re-broadcasted for the benefit of Commander Byrd and his men a musical program which came in from Sydney, Australia. The distance from Sydney to Pittsburgh is 900 miles, and from Pittsburgh to the Antarctic is 11,000 miles, so the Sydney music had to travel 12,000 miles.
