PERHAPS BUNK

All the speeches made by so-called educators at conventions of educators at conventions of educators are not necessarily true, says an American exchange. Neither is all the criticism of those speeches always true. A professor of education in a southern university, speaking at the National Education association convention, asserts that the practice of having high school students memorize literary masterpieces and dates is all wrong. He says the practice may actually unfit the young folks for life. All of which one would like to say in a loud voice is bunk. The trouble is that the memory is not trained enough. And men and women today who have been to high school know too little poetry, can repeat almost no great prose works are distressingly unfamiliar with the most beautiful expressions in the English language. And their memories are frayed out, inactive, undependable.

Fortunately one never has to believe all one hears at a convention. Whoever went to a convention to listen to speeches anyway?

WATCHFULNESS

The old saying is that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. That is to say the people of any country must be ever watchful or the forces of special privilege, of dictatorship, of autocracy will gradually take away their liberties. And in our different jobs in life we must be equally watchful. We can't win every time. We are sure to make errors. The sensible thing to do, after mistakes, is first to analyze the reasons, quit worrying about it—and then look forward and be watchful.

Canadian historical data which is handled by some of the daily newspapers is not always accurate. Here is a case in point: 1925—Hon. A. B. Copp, resigned as Secretary of State in the Mackenzie King Cabinet. He had been M. P. for Westmorland, N. B., 1915-25, when he was defeated at the general elections of that year. The fact is that Hon. Mr. Copp, was appointed to the Senate just prior to the general election of 1925 and Hon. E. A. Smith replaced him as Liberal candidate in Westmorland. Hon. W. E. Foster succeeded him as secretary of state in the cabinet and succeeded in carrying one seat for the Liberals.

An Einstein disciple writes to the New York World that "the three dimensional space in which we hang curves back on itself through a fourth dimension which we are unable to visualize." We believe he figured this out in a revolving door.

In a new detective novel by Brian Flynn, the murder victim is found in the billiard room instead of the library. A tentative theory is the affair was the outcome of a kelly pool game.

Rhode Island woman wants a divorce because her husband frequently went to sleep and snored in a theatre. But that's a stunt that ought to be emulated; it might kill off a lot of bum shows.

No matter whether you agree or not with the theology of those Moslems, you'll have to admit that they work twenty four hours a day, seven days in the week at their religion.

A report from Rome says the latest addition to the Duce's household basks for several hours a day in her father's smile. This would give very little room though, for a good basker.

Work on the new sidewalk for Queen street has been started in the West End and on the blind side of the street.

There is said to be a demand for cheaper wedding rings. We're not surprised; they've cheapened the marriages, too.

There must be something in this 18 day diet. We know of a woman who carried it through and her husband lost fourteen pounds.

Vienna physician is now proclaiming the virtues of "sun bathed chocolate." Ever try giving a cake of chocolate a sun bath?

We have an idea it would be rather interesting to hear an endurance flier's wife and a golf widow compare notes.

Yale University is going to experiment with a monkey farm in Florida. Something in the nature of an extension course or vocational school?
