New Brunswick

Sow Better Seeds

Good Seed will produce from 10 p. c. to 100 p. c. more crop than will ungraded, weed infested seed.

"A sower went forth to sow."

THE New Brunswick Department of Agriculture encourages the use of BETTER SEEDS and the growing of BETTER CROPS by:—

1. A for-sale record of New Brunswick grown farm seeds—Wheat and Oats, field examined grain, tested for purity and germination; also No. 1 Government Certified Seed Potatoes. Growers and users are placed in touch through this record.
2. Annual seed crop competitions for cash prizes.
3. Financial assistance to Seed Fairs.
4. Financial assistance in the establishment of seed cleaning facilities and centres by farmers organizations.
5. Free drainage surveys and payment of freight on car-lot orders of drain tile.
6. Assistance in securing ground limestone rock by payments on freight to equalize the freight charges to any point in the Province.

NOT WANTED AS A BRIDE FOR KING BORIS

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 22—Although the Bulgarian government regards it as of paramount importance that King Boris of that country marry soon to found a dynasty, the prospect of an American wife would not appeal to them.

Andre Liapcheff, the Bulgarian Premier, said today: "Our King's marriage with a wealthy American heiress, as so often suggested, would be as impracticable as inopportune. Our beloved sovereign will never marry for money. Wealth, splendor and pomp mean nothing to him. He is only happy when he shares the company, the fortunes and the trials of his own humble people."

Algiers, May 22—International Nickel Company of Canada and subsidiaries net profit in the three months ended March 31, was $5,590,191, equal to 36 cents a share on the common stock, against $2,107,920 in the same period of 1928.

METHODS OF POSTMASTER GENERAL ARE OUT OF DATE, SAYS WINNIPEG FREE PRESS

(Manitoba Free Press)

The Conservative opposition in the Dominion Parliament, in carrying on for several days a vigorous attack upon the administration of the Post Office department, showed that they have a realization that the temper of the public is hostile to anything that looks like a revival of the spoils system. While in the particular case of the postmaster at Simcoe, upon which a motion of censure was moved, the minister had a technical defence which was fairly sound, the general discussion, with the instances of dismissals cited by members taking part in it, was pretty conclusive that Mr. Veniot has been willingly active in the petty wretched business of cutting off the heads of rural postmasters at the demand of local patronage committees or the sitting member. This means that in this limited sense we have been having an application of the spoils system which is out of keeping with the stage of political civilization at which we have arrived and is repugnant to public feeling. Postmasters in the larger part offices are protected by the rule that there must be an investigation based upon formal charges; but with respect to the small offices the minister has been avowedly acting upon the principle that he will give effect to a recommendation as to dismissal or appointment by the sitting member or the defeated candidate, if of the approved political color. These are mostly small offices with remuneration which seems trifling; but, nevertheless as was made clear during the discussion, there is often a good deal of personal hardship involved in the loss of even a small office. Public opinion, we are very sure, does not desire that the humblest official should be dismissed at the say-so of any individual without the right of some kind of an inquiry at which a defence can be offered.

Not Tactful

Mr. Veniot, in defending himself, Mr. Veniot, in defending himself, was not very tactful or conciliatory. He had on difficulty in proving that the practice he has no such record of butchery of officials as that made by Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster-General in the Borden administration in 1912; but this is no defence. Canada has moved forward a bit in the past seventeen years. Nor did it help to show how ready the shadow government of 1926 was to wield the axe during its brief moment of power. The shadow government was thrown out of office the moment the electors could get at it; and they put the Liberal Government into power because they had confidence—a confidence that events have shown to be misplaced—that it would use the power given it with discretion, propriety and in the public interest. They did not consciously authorize Mr. Veniot to practice the spoils; of to offer a defence for it in the House which reveals a spirit of impenitent bravado. We quote a characteristic passage from Hansard, the case being that of a woman postmistress in Lunenburg, N. S. Dismissed upon the order of the Postmaster-General, no reasons were given:

Woman Dismissed

Mr. Ernst: I want to ask the Postmaster-General why that woman was dismissed and on whose recommendations.

Mr. Veniot: you have got the answer there. I instructed the deputy to make the dismissal. It was made on my recommendation.

Mr. Ernst: I certainly do not intend to accept an answer like that. That is no answer at all. There must have been someone who recommended the dismissal and suggested reasons, there must have been a departmental investigation, and so forth. There must be some reason assigned by the Postmaster-General before he can dismiss a public servant and justify the dismissal before the House of Commons.

Mr. Veniot; the only answer I can give the hon. gentleman is that if I received a recommendation I acted upon it, and if that recommendation came to me marked "personal" I do not think the House would say that I should put that personal letter on file. I do not know at the moment whether it was marked "personal" or not. Personally I feel that I am justified in holding back a letter that is marked "personal" when I take the responsibility for carrying out whatever recommendations may be contained in it.

It is pretty clear from the facts adduced that this dismissal was a petty act of revenge. The dismissal of the woman was asked for by the defeated Liberal candidate; by the cheap device of marking his letter "personal."

Mr. Veniot has been in Ottawa for only some three years, coming from a province where perhaps measures of this sort are tolerated. He ought to be beginning to learn by now that these methods in the Federal field, are out of date. If he is incapable of learning he should be encouraged to return, with the least possible delay to his former environment. As matters are, he is becoming a liability to the Dominion Government.

TICKET SELLER SEES FIRST PLAY IN 39 YEARS

Boston, May 22—Vincent Featherstone recently attended a performance of "The Beggar's Opera." It was the first play he had seen in thirty-nine years.

During that period he sold more than 1,000,000 tickets at the box office of the Hollis Theatre.

FOR GOD'S SAKE!

Negro Won

Colliessum, New York, May 22—Smiling "Keed" Chocolate, the battling bon-bon of the bantamweights, waged a furious struggle tonight to stamp himself as the outstanding gladiator of a championless division, but failed to convince entirely a crowd of 18,000 jammed in Jess McMahon's big boxing barn that he is the master of Fidel La Barba.

New Brunswick Roads Are Open to Motor Traffic

Read and Observe the following provisions of the recently amended Motor Vehicle Act:—

Every Driver Must Have a License

Every person, who drives a motor vehicle on the highways of New Brunswick, must have an operator's license or a chauffeur's license. This license must be carried at all times and must be immediately produced upon the request of any traffic officer.

Endorsements Required on License

Every operator's license must be signed by the holder and bear the endorsement of an examiner, who has examined the person named in such license and is satisfied as to his ability to drive a motor vehicle and that he knows the rules of the road.

Special Operator's License For Youthful Drivers

A special operator's license may be obtained by a person between the ages of sixteen and eighteen years, who satisfies the Department of Public Works as to his ability to operate a motor vehicle and upon the payment of the fee of $1.00.

A Chauffeur's License—When Necessary

Every person, who operates a motor vehicle for the purpose of transporting passengers or freight for hire, must have a chauffeur's license.

Always Have Registration Certificate in Your Car

A Certificate of Registration, showing the registration number, weight, style of body, serial and motor numbers and name of owner, must always be carried in every motor vehicle.

You'll observe the law, won't you? Thank you!

New Brunswick Department of Public Works
