NEEDS 8 HOUR DAY

Carrie Chapman Catt says the housewife needs an eight-hour day, and tells how, with the aid of labor-saving appliances, she can get it.

This reminds us of Grandma, and how she got along with four people in the family. On Monday she did the washing, and usually had the clothes hung out to dry by noon. On Tuesday she did the ironing, which took a little longer. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday she did the mending, cleaned the house, and accomplished whatever jobs might turn up. Friday night she set three loaves of bread; Saturday morning she baked it and made a dozen pies and a kettle of fried cakes or a few pans of cookies. She also found time to keep the flower garden, take care of a few chickens, and do the marketing. Grandma, of course, knew how to run a house. She had a system and she stuck to it. She had efficiency plus in spite of occasional twinges of rheumatism, she lived to be 80.

Robert Burns, Scotland's immortal bard, who is often referred to as "the great poet of humanity" was born in Ayrshire, 170 years ago today. His life was a short one, he having passed away in 1796 at the age of 37 years, but he crowded a lot into it, and his name will live for ever while the Holy Willies and others whom he satired were long ago forgotten. The poetical works of Burns won for Scotland the reverence of millions who knew her not and his name is honored everywhere throughout the civilized world. Since his death millions have wandered in pilgrimage to Scotland to view his birthplace and the banks and braes made famous by his writings.

One of the reasons why Robert Burns, Scotland's immortal bard, died in poverty was that he was born 150 years too soon. Were he alive today he would have little difficulty in financing the publication of his poems and wouldn't the movie men and the radio broadcasting concerns like to do business with him.

The Camel is a most convenient beast: Roy Chapman Andrews, in the Gobi, found that it shed its hair in big wads, just as packing material was needed for the dinosaur eggs, etc.

Wonder what the hardy pioneer, who wrestled with life in the raw, would think of the Syracuse professor's demand, in these soft times, for bigger cusswords.

That popular song, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love," has always seemed to us more of the nature of a confession than an expression of full-fledged endearment.

That Iowa professor who has settled down to the risk of training an oyster hasn't the hardest job in the world. There are things dumber than oysters.

Our idliest wonder for the week is whether anyone, so far, in the Byrd expedition has climbed into the iceless icebox which was taken along to get warm.

In a manner of speaking an octogenarian goes back to his second childhood when he marries an eighteen-year-old flapper.

The great tragedy in the fat outfielder's life is that when he is fat he can't field and when he is boiled down he is too weak to hit.

We sometimes wonder whether other persons feel as we do in the rumble seat—that is, as if we were just being dragged along?

A scientist has developed a light so small it can only be seen with a microscope. This should make a first-rate bridge lamp for an atom.

It would seem that after the butcher gets his price for the liver he ought to be able to dispose of the rest of the calf pretty reasonably.

The toughest period in the life of a piece of furniture is when it is out of service in the attic, slowly becoming antique.

Artists measure feminine beauty with a tape-line. Lovers use the heart.

Hi Slocum says that it is a good trick if you can walk up and down Queen street without taking a tumble.

Middle age is that period in life when a man begins to talk about how good he feels when he doesn't feel very good.

Lima Beane thinks the man who tells the woman he would die for her had much better live for her until he gets over it.

Wise prophets date their predictions so far ahead that nobody will remember them when they fail of fulfillment.

Old resident is right about our climate changing. Sometimes we get as many as three changes within a few hours.

Even the dyed in the wool gossip hates to hear of more than two or three tales to distribute in one day. It makes her too tired by bedtime.

The local merchant who announced that he would have no cheap sales this year, is not likely to have any sheriff's sales either.

In Search of Heirs

Major J. S. Scott, secretary-treasurer of the Municipality of York is in receipt of a letter from a life insurance company at Hartford, Conn., enquiring about the next of kin to one George White who is alleged to have been born in this city in 1838. He resided here until thirty years of age when he removed to the United States. When he disappeared some years ago he carried a paid up life insurance policy which now amounts to quite a substantial sum. He is now presumed to be dead and the company would like to hear of his heirs in order that it might hand over to them the proceeds of the policy.

Died Last Night

The death occurred last night after a lingering illness of Miss Ellen O'Brien, at her home at 278 St. John street. Deceased was well known and highly esteemed and her passing will leave many grieving relatives and friends. She leaves two sisters, Miss Julia at home and Mrs. Cormier of St. John. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning, leaving the home at 8.45 o'clock. High Mass of Requiem will be celebrated at St. Dunstan's church at nine o'clock, service being conducted by Rev. Dr. Milligan. Interment will be made at the Hermitage.

Says Show a Big Success

Mr. Lee McCutcheon, of this city who has been attending the Sportsmen's Show at Boston returned home yesterday. He says that the show is a great success in every respect and that the New Brunswick exhibit is the outstanding feature. The New Brunswick guides all are doing a land office business. Mr. McCutcheon says that the province next season should witness a big influx of tourists and anglers. He says that Raymond Currie has booked a large number of angling parties for the St. John and Miramichi Rivers.

Left For St. Stephen

The University of New Brunswick hockey sextet, in charge of Coach Larry McLean, left this morning for St. Stephen where tonight they will meet the St. Stephen Ravens in an exhibition attraction. The game will be a good practice game for the college boys in preparation for their intercollegiate schedule, which opens on February 7th. The Ravens are reputed to have a fast team and the game ought to prove a good one. The Red and Black lineup this evening will probably be: Goal, Coffey; defence, Gagnon and Neill; forwards, Keene, Lynch, Keenan; relief, Minue, Adams, Burns.

Number At Dance

Victoria Lodge, No. 13, I. O. O. F., held another of their weekly dances in their building in Carleton street last evening and there was a large crowd in attendance. McGinn's Orchestra furnished the latest music and a very enjoyable time was spent.

NOWADAYS YOU PRESS A BUTTON

Or perhaps a switch, or some little gadget, and a lot of things happen around home that lighten labor and banish trouble.

A Whirling Fan brings a cooling breeze, and a little copper, dish-like affair throws out a sizzling blast that warms the room in no time.

Another button boils coffee, toasts bread and cooks waffles. Another does a better job than a broom. Another makes a happy laundress out of a dismal washwoman. Another one cools the ice-box. Another—but why go on?

Labor and time saving devices have come and are today within the reach of the humblest home.

And one of the chief reasons why they have come and why they are within the reach of the humblest home is the power of advertising.

Advertising has carried the news of these better ways of doing things to every home. It has created a desire to possess them, and countless thousands have purchased them, and live better because of them.

Reading advertising not only tells you about new, helpful mechanical devices for the home, but it is an unerring guide to reliable products.

READ ADVERTISING REGULARLY. IT POINTS THE WAY TO BETTER LIVING.
