A WORLD FIGURE

The passing of Georges Clemenceau, war time premier of France, and one of the world's outstanding strong men will be deeply regretted. He had reached the advanced age of eighty eight years, but had enjoyed very good health up to within a short time ago. He had a severe heart attack a month ago, but partially recovered from it. The gallant fight he put up against the disease attracted world wide attention.

The splendid work of Clemenceau as Premier during the great war will be readily recalled. He was a tireless worker, possessed of an abiding faith in his country and while holding the office of Premier did much to inspire and stimulate confidence in the cause of the Allies. He was called the Tiger of France and the title was well chosen.

At the close of the war the Tiger despite his advanced years paid a visit to the United States and was given a wonderful reception. He was a superman and held the love and confidence of the French people to a marked degree. One of the world's great statesmen has passed from the stage in the death of Georges Clemenceau.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE

In this age of progress and efficiency it is cheering to know that old fashioned romance has not entirely disappeared from the world. Not long ago a Western man was granted a patent on an invention which is likely to become a factor in the safety of submarines. It brought him fame, some money and a great deal of newspaper publicity. The stories were read by a young woman in Arizona and she conceived the idea that this man must be the father from whom she was parted when a little girl. Correspondence ensued between them and she is now hailed as his long lost daughter.

This reads like the plot of a novel that was popular in the days of our grandfathers, but its very simplicity will make it appeal strongly to large numbers of readers. It is very easy to laugh at the tale of the missing will which is finally discovered in the tea canister on the upper shelf of the kitchen cupboard or the waif whose distinguished birth is proved by the mole on her left shoulder but such things do happen in real life, and the reading of them helps to vary the monotony of life for many who are unable to find romance in any other way.

So let us all give three cheers for the inventor and his long lost daughter. We hope the yarn is true.

FRAMING A POLICY

The tendency of the average mind is toward confusion. It isn't so much that we think wrong about things or that we think right about them. The trouble is that we think, if any, in a confused way. Matters are turned over and over in the mind in a kind of dizzy process. That sort of thinking is fatiguing. It uses up the nervous energy rapidly. Exhaustion follows. To have a confused mind is to be in irritating if not serious trouble.

What can we do about it? Man or woman needs a policy. If you like it better, you may call it a philosophy instead of a policy. Adopt the policy and follow it—and save yourself from confusion of the mind.

BEING WISE

It is said that wisdom denotes the pursuing of the best ends by the best means. That's a rare combination. Some are wise enough to know the best ends but they make a bad job of the means. Some are clever, have engaging personalities, know how to get what they want, but choose the wrong ends. Most of us need to cultivate the habit of thinking quietly, making up our minds with as little prejudice as possible as to what wisdom really is and how to pursue it. Unfortunately some of the best work of most able brains is devoted to ends that in the long run are not worth reaching.

The late Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance, was a capable administrator and possessed of a good understanding of human nature. On one occasion in Parliament his budget proposals included an exemption from the stamp tax or cheques up to $5. He was asked by an opposition member if there was anything to hinder a person from issuing more than one check of the amount of $5 in payment of an account and thus avoiding the tax. "Don't ask me to tell people how to defraud the revenue," was his quick rejoinder.

When millions heard the prime minister of Great Britain earnestly trying to guide the thoughts of men into the channels of permanent peace the radio was justifying itself. It is worth all the chaff of the wireless to find it on occasion put to uses which have a bearing on the whole history and destination of mankind. It would be hard to say how much the prime minister's visit to the United States was augmented in importance by the use of the radio.

Mr. Edison says no one knows a millionth part of anything, and that gives a defeated candidate who has just finished reading the returns on the beating he has taken, a good laugh.

It seems that investors who know nothing about the stock market should consult someone who does know, before they go in and should then stay out.

We read that a girl who has been left close to a million needs a chaperon. Well, perhaps the majority of us would need a chaperon if we were left very close to a million.

"As a rule" observes the Boston Herald, "the best vacation plans are the earliest made." On the basis we presume, that anticipation is better than realization.

It is announced that the Sydney, N. S. Record, a Liberal newspaper has been purchased by interests very close to the Halifax Chronicle.

Not yet has it been thought necessary to broaden the straight and narrow path.

Half the world doesn't know how the other half lives. Nor would glass houses supply the information.

Unless the man who said it is wrong there are 2,000 calories in a pound of doughnuts. Either believe it or count them.

It has been a long time since anything has been heard from the girls on Mars. Possibly the wife of the man who was in communication with them is still sitting on his head.

There is nothing for us to say of the girl who jumped out of the plane at a height of 2,000 feet, and she can't say anything. The story of the thrill will remain untold.

Tests have demonstrated that the electric fan actually raises the temperature of a room. But, of course, the use of electric fans would be an expensive method of warming the house in winter.

England's highest court has ruled that a woman is a person. It looks as though a preponderance of the world's wisdom, to say nothing of its wit and humor, rests in the judicial mind.
