CANADA WATCHING DEVELOPMENTS ACROSS THE BOARDER

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—Official circles in Ottawa watch with an intense interest today the probable developments from the latest and what is probably designed to be the last campaign of frightfulness initiated by the Germans. The decision of the United States government in the extremely grave situation that confronts it is awaited with much speculation and considerable concern.

Had the President in his past performances not proven himself peculiarly long suffering and disposed towards a "peace at any price" policy, his action in the present crisis could more easily be forecasted.

How the American nation will now be able to keep out of the war, unless it would abandon its national self-respect, is difficult to comprehend here.

Canada is virtually interested in the situation because the German plan is deliberately designed to starve the mother country, which, in a very considerable measure depends upon the Dominion for her food supplies.

There is no thought here that the marine activity or the transportation of men, munitions and food will in any way be diminished, but the attendant risk is doubtless increased and the need of precautionary measures emphasized. The British navy has never relinquished its control of the seas and there is a supreme confidence in the ability of the Admiralty to cope with the present situation and effect reprisals.

If the United States comes into the conflict, the resources of her shipping, as well as German interned ships can be utilized in carrying supplies to the Allies. With the protection that the American navy can give, the possible effect upon British shipping of the new submarine policy will be, it is thought, largely neutralized by the increased available tonnage and the added assistance of the United States navy.

Developments are awaited with a most intense interest superseding anything that is going on in parliament.

LAYING AGES OF HENS.

Result of Test at Maryland Experiment Station.

The difference in laying quality in hens of different ages is shown in the result of a 3-year test at the Maryland Experiment Station with a flock of 60 birds. During their first year these birds laid 857 dozen eggs and returned a profit of $124. In their second year they laid only 745 dozen at a profit of $96. Records for their third year showed only 576 dozen eggs and a profit of $54.

The cost of keeping this flock was $90 for each year, everything above that being pure gain. This clearly shows the great advantage in keeping the flock at maximum production.

Except for the work of gathering the eggs the non-layers require as much attention and approximately as much feed as the workers.
