THE WAY TO THE LAND OF LINGER.

(New York Herald, July 19, 1903.)
In the beautiful land of Linger
There's never a thing to do
But to sit and twirl your finger
And loaf as it pleases you.

That is, there is nothing pressing,
But loving and being gay,
Or else—and this isn't guessing—
It's a land where you needn't stay. It's a land of continual kissing-

You are always saying goodby—
And the only things you are missing
Are the things that make you cry. It's a land of winking and blinking,

No summer, or winter, or fall; Where you lie without any thinking And never get up at all. ome people there are who never

Go out of this pleasant land, And with tired faces ever They sit, for they couldn't stand. Let's go! It is ever so easy,
We'll put off at once the day
And journey, because we're so lazy,
And lo! we are there right away.

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?

My! This certainly IS good

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea—and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.
