ARCHIE MacDIARMID,
Auctioneer.Fixing Things For Jimmy

"I? But what on earth can I do?"
"Do?" Jimmy was becoming excited now. "Why, listen; you can do everything. You can get things all settled up—at least you can find out if there's any way we can settle 'em up.
Don't you see? For instance," Jimmy waved a hand, "they're sitting up there on the porch together now. Don't you see what an easy thing it would be if you could just happen to walk past and kind of pause there and let him see who you are? And then, naturally, he'll come down and speak to you—"

"Oh, most naturally—" Jane bobbed her head solemnly—"it'll be the first thing he'll do."
"Well, it will. He'll remember you all right, and if he doesn't, you can sort of start past and then kind of hesitate and look at him and then walk on. And that'll start his curiosity going and he'll think who you are and hunt you up."

"Jimmy Reynolds! Do you mean to say that you want me to flirt?"
"Flirt?" Jimmy hedged desperately.
"Nothing of the kind! I'd like to see the fellow that I'd catch flirting with you! I'd—"

"Kick at him while he hit you with a board," Jane cut in. "But go ahead—"Please," Jimmy Reynolds was pleading now—"won't you be serious Sis?
Just be serious for a minute or two until I tell you what I want."

"All right. I'm serious and seriouser."

Jimmy put an arm around his sister.
"Well, listen. That wouldn't be flirting. It would just be sort of calling yourself to his mind—that is, providing he doesn't recognize you right away and come to meet you. Well, as I said, you could go up there and then after you've met him and everything, kind of swing things around so that he'll ask to take you out somewhere tomorrow—you girls know how to work it—and at the same time you could let a little hint drop to Marion that I'd be around to call for her in the morning. A hint is all she'll need.
Don't you see?"

"As plain as mud."

"Well, then, tomorrow—well, tomorrow, I could find out just how Marion feels and see if she really and truly would accept me and in the meantime you could sort of be finding out whether Ed still was too mad at me to make up. And you could sort of pave the way for me to come along and smooth things out—don't you see?"

Jane Reynolds winked very, very slowly.
"I'm to be the little peacemaker and climb over the mountains and scuff up my shoes and all that sort of thing just to make it easy for you to find out where you stand. But—"

"A five pound box of candy, Sis, if you'll try it."

"Why, Jimmy, I wouldn't think of—"

"Ten pounds! Please be decent, Sis, won't you? Go on, be a good fellow!"

Slants of HumorTHE NEW POETRY.

I've wondered a lot as I've read in the books And papers the poetry new,
That the lines do not rhyme in the olden time When the last words matched all the way through.

They would say, "A fair maiden Sat in a high tower
And sang a most beautiful song; Her voice like a lark and her face like a flower
As she wove and she sang all day long."

Now they say, "A young lady Sat in a box seat
And she sighed as she watched the sad play;
Her whispers were music, her face well massaged, For she'd curled and she'd powdered all afternoon."

Jane Reynolds looked out the window.

"I guess I'll have to, she concluded, "and I'd better get started. It'll be dark in a half hour."

"Gosh, Sis, you're a regular fellow!
I'll wait for you upstairs here. I don't want him to see me, you know You understand."

"Oh, certainly," Jane Reynolds was reaching for her hat. "You wait here."

And Jimmy waited, waited while the lessening hum of conversation from the veranda below told of early retiring summer tourists, while the camp-fires of beefsteak parties on the mountains in the distance flared and faded, while the music of the dance from the pavilion down at the lake sounded in its various phases, then died away.
It grew late—but Jimmy continued to sit in the darkness, blinking against sleep. Finally he nodded—then started at the sound of a hurried step in the hall.

Jane entered and snapped on the light, turning to look at her blinking brother.

"I thought you were interested," she said seriously.

"I am—why?"

"You look it, standing there, blinking like some decrepit old owl. I'll bet you've been asleep ever since I left here."

"I haven't either. But I thought you never were going to come back."

"Well, of all the ingratitude. But seriously, Jimmy, it was a hard job."

Jimmy put on his most patronizing air.

"Sis, there isn't anybody who knows that better than I do. But did you fix it?"

"Why, certainly. He's to come by at 7 in the morning to take me to Castle Rock. After that the day's—now, Jimmy, for goodness' sake don't hug me."

But the hugging was accomplished just the same, and a moment more, a wide eyed, enthusiastic Jimmy had hurried to his room to make preparations for the morrow.

PROCLAMATION

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor directs the publication of the following for general information:

Whereas, the 1st of July is the semi-centennial of the confederation of the Canadian Provinces

And, Whereas, a joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons was appointed to consider and report on the proper celebration of the occasion;

And, Whereas, the said committee have recommended that, "As the day falls on Sunday, it seems to be particularly fitting that the churches and the Sabbath schools of all denominations should incorporate into their exercises the recognition of the facts and lessons embodied in our national birth and fifty years of progress, and have requested that all Clergymen and Sabbath School Superintendents give to the celebration their hearty and intelligent co-operation";

And, Whereas, Monday the 2nd day of July, has been fixed by proclamation for the celebration of Dominion Day, and the committee have recommended that the celebration on that day be as "general as possible, without expensive and elaborate display, as befits war time, and carried out on the broadest social and democratic lines, a plain sincere people's demonstration, a tribute to the founders of our Domi-on and the institutions and ideals of our common country,"

We do most earnestly request that the cities and municipalities of the Province, clubs and patriotic associations, co-operate with the citizens generally in commemorating the day and the occasion, along the lines suggested in the report.

In view of the terrible war in which we are engaged the occasion should be one for serious thought and full recognition of the grave dangers to which Canada and the Empire are exposed, and the obligations that rest upon us all as citizens. We especially request that the clergymen of all denominations throughout the Province, Sunday School Superintendents and Teachers, in the religious services of Sunday, the 1st of July, do honor to the memory of the noble and brave men who have made the supreme sacrifice for their country, as well as to those who are still facing danger and death upon the battlefield, and that the religious exercise of the day be characterized with a spirit of loyalty, unselfish service, and earnest prayer for the success of the sacred cause for which we are fighting.

And we further request that on Monday, the 2nd of July, all municipal and city officers co-operate with the various patriotic localities, and that all citizens by a display of flags and suitable decorations at their homes and places of business, give hearty support and countenance to this movement, that this semi-centennial celebration of confederation may testify to our appreciation and grateful acknowledgment of the many blessings and great prosperity our Province has enjoyed, and the continued unity and patriotism of the Canadian people.

ROBERT MURRAY,
Tins Provincial Secretary-Treasurer.

To Teachers and School Officers: In accordance with the proclamation of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, teachers and school officers are requested at the school closings of the present term, to have special reference made, in as far as practicable, to the Fiftieth Anniversary of Confederation and the historic incidents connected therewith.

W. S. CARTER,
Chief Superintendent of Education,
Education Office, June 20th, 1917.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On July 1st, the undersigned will open a new retail dairy in the city.
Fifteen years' experience have taught me that absolute cleanliness combined with quality of goods, are the essentials necessary to make such a business a success.

Thanks to the public for the liberal patronage afforded me in the past, and soliciting further favors, in return for which I trust I shall always be able to give satisfaction to patrons.
