Slants of HumorWHY THEY BURIED HIM.

"It is a rule to which most good lawyers adhere," observed a well known attorney, "never to tell more than one knows. There was an incident in a western town where a lawyer carried the rule to extreme.

"Counsel for one side objected to a person whose name was on the court's register for some purpose or other, on the ground that he was dead. The counsel on the other side declined to accept the assurance and demanded conclusive testimony on the point.

"Whereupon counsel for the other side arose and gave corroborative evidence as to the decease of the man in question.

"But, sir, how do you know the man's dead?" demanded the opposing counsel.

"Well," was the reply. "I don't know. It's very difficult to prove."
"As I suspected. You don't know whether he's dead or not."

"No, but I know this — they buried him about a month ago on suspicion!"

GIVES HIM ROPE.

"I can't bear that young leading man; he's so conceited. How do you manage to get along with him?"

"I always talk to him about himself for a while, and then he talks to me about himself."

ALWAYS AFTER THE STORM.

A colored boy was shot by a man who had fired at another man. The police were trying to find the negro who did the shooting.

"A policeman is just like a rainbow," asserted an old woman. "They always show up after the storm's over."

FOOD CONSERVATION

SOME little time ago the C. P. R. realizing that economy in the use of food products was an essential of true patriotism during the war, inaugurated a policy in connection with their dining car service which prohibited the purchase of calves, young lambs, little chickens, and baby pigs, as result of which thousands of these tender but immature animals will be conserved increase in their value as food supply will result. This action was due to the belief that in the face of the serious food shortage which the present world crisis threatens to bring upon us, it is criminal to waste an ounce of food or to indulge in dishes which are secured to-day at the cost of tomorrow.

The practice has been extended to embrace all services operated by the Canadian Pacific, and other Canadian and American lines recognizing the importance of this plan of conservation of young stock, have adopted a similar course.

The Canadian Pacific dining car service has so contrived that the high cost of living does not exist insofar as that service is concerned, it always being possible to obtain, in a Canadian Pacific dining car, a good meal at a moderate price. This has been made possible by making a close study of the traveller's wants and of the portions left uneaten which soon convinced the company that the old established custom of serving extremely large portions was wasteful and extravagant. The result was that when the war broke out and the price of foodstuffs began to soar, the argument was advanced that smaller but satisfying portions at reasonable prices would better meet the situation than the former large portions, the maintenance of which would have necessitated higher prices with much waste. The dietetic first out of consideration for weak digestions but also with the economic viewpoint that it costs less to have a menu composed of a few dishes for which there is likely to be a general demand than it does to offer a hundred dishes the demand for any one of which is uncertain. This brought about the introduction of the single portion or individual service, particularly for the benefit of lady travellers, who, as a rule, are less heavy eaters than men.

In the practical form of price control and food conservation, the C. P.
R. dining car system has gone a step further by this omission from their menu of all dishes consisting of the flesh of calves young lambs, little chickens and baby pigs. Lamb's fries, sweetbreads and calf's liver also are no longer purchased or used in the C. P. R. service on the ground that the developed animal provides more food for the nation, and that only full-grown animals should be slaughtered.
