MISS WAI TSU NEW KNITS FOR ALLIES

Boston, Nov. 23.—"Why of course, I'm knitting for American soldiers," says Miss Wai Tsu New, a Chinese student at Radcliffe College, with a smiling emphasis on the "of course."

"But I want to do all I can for all our soldiers and it really doesn't make any difference if it's a Frenchman or a Tommy, or an American, now does it?"

"Still I do wish that all this we are saving at college by not having parties and entertainments would be given directly to the cause."

Miss New is a good student, but at the same time she objects to the cutting out of college activities unless the equivalent is offered in aid. In fact, so good a student is she that she is going to complete the regular college course in three and a half years.

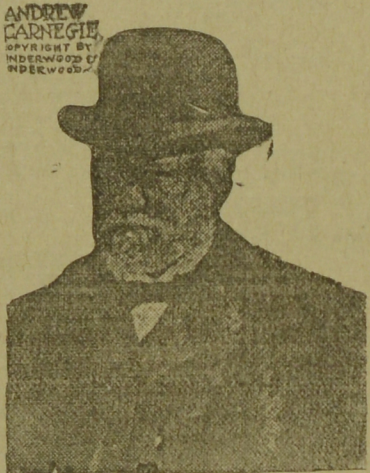

"I'm so chuckfull of impressions of America that I shall have to write a book, 'Ra-d-c-i-l-l-e', and she hummed the college song "that's the biggest of all."

Miss New is a popular member of the Junior class. Besides knowing how to swing the bat in a baseball game, she is a strong hockey player, and is also prominent in musical affairs. Last year she took part in the opera "Orpheus," presented by the Choral Society last year.

HARDEN AGAIN ON DECK.

Amsterdam, Nov. 26.—Maximilian Harden has been permitted to republish his newspaper, Die Zukunft, according to Tageblatt. Harden also will be allowed to continue his pictures, forbidden a month ago.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER SO GOOD AS Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills.

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

OLD STORIES THAT FELL FLAT

(Chicago News.)

"The story that will make one man break a flat laughing, falls flat when told to another," observed the lawyer. "I have been laughing at intervals for a quarter of a century over a yarn I heard so long ago as that and I used to tell it often, but it never seemed as funny to anyone else as it seems to me."

"James Russell Lowell was visiting W. E. Gladstone one day and asked the statesman how tall he was. Gladstone announced his height and Lowell said 'I don't think you're quite that tall, Mr. Gladstone.'"

"Gladstone backed up to the wall and was measured and the result astonished him. 'Why,' he said, 'I was two inches taller when a young man.'"

"Lowell explained that men lose in height as they grow old. He said it reminded him of the story of Methuselah, who was celebrating his 900th birthday, and a number of neighbors dropped in to congratulate him and ask him how he was. 'I'm all right,' said Methuselah, 'only my blamed shoe laces keep flapping in my face.'"

"Now that," concluded the lawyer, "is what I call a funny story."

The innocent bystanders grinned feebly. "Alfred Henry Lewis used to tell a story that made me giggle," said the bookseller. "It treated of a number of colored gentlemen who were telling fish stories. They didn't believe the truth had anything to do with such a contest and one after another strained his inventive faculties. 'Some of the falsehoods were pretty far-fetched and they had a wearying effect on the old man, who waited until the others had finished and then told of a trifling exploit of his own. He hooked a black bass, he said, and fought with it for three hours. It was the most titanic struggle he ever had. Finally he conquered and lifted the fish out of the water. As the bass swung through the air it was so mad it shook itself so its scales sounded like shot in a bottle, and it let out a yell that could be heard a mile away.' 'Well,' queried the doctor after a pause, 'finish the story.' 'I told all there was of it,' replied the bookseller. "I think it a very humorous story just as it stands, but there's always a sepulchral silence, like that surrounding me now, whenever I tell it." "Sir Walter Scott always had a dog or two along with him when he was at home," remarked the librarian. "One tempestuous day he was seated in the house with a big collie lying at his feet, when a couple of squirrels blew in out of the storm and made themselves at home."

"After a while they began arguing some point of heraldry, a subject on which Sir Walter was wonderfully posted. They got loud and excited and waved their arms and stamped their feet, and the dog, evidently thinking they threatened his master, got up and barked. 'Shut up, you fool!' said Sir Walter to the dog. 'You don't know any more about heraldry than they do.' 'That was the wittiest rebuke I ever heard,' added the librarian."
