

Enemies of Tea

If tea is left open near oranges, soap, spices, matches, etc., the tea will take on the flavor of any of these articles.

In fact, tea absorbs odors as readily as does butter. This is because it becomes so dry and brittle in passing through the firing or drying oven that it becomes very sensitive to the moisture and odors in the air.

When loose in the chest or bin or bag it quickly loses flavor and strength. Tastes flat, weak, old; dear at any price.

This is why Red Rose is never sold in bulk—but always in sealed packages. The armour that keeps our dust and odors and keeps in the flavor and strength.

The price printed on the package protects you against overcharge. It is the lowest price for which a tea of Red Rose quality can be sold—a price which allows the grocer only a fair profit.

You will enjoy the distinctive flavor and rich strength of Red Rose Tea. Try a package.

A CHARM ABOUT LIFE IN A TENT

Tents, Once Only for Primitive People, Have Now Become Domesticated—An Illustration.

(Chicago News.)

"There has always been something alluring about the tent," declared the professor. "The Arab, the soldier, the explorer and all those interesting nomads, are tent dwellers."

"To say nothing of the elephant, the spangled beauty and the kangaroo," added the reckless boarder.

"It is the charm of the tent that lends enjoyment to the fishing, hunting and summer camp," resumed the professor.

"Tents are middling hot in the day time and transparent at night if observed from the outside when the inside is illuminated," suggested Stews, the worldly wise.

"Tents are all right for primitive people, but they have no place in civilized life," declared the clean shaven boarder with a wrist watch.

"You're wrong there," responded the bow-legged boarder. "Tents have been domesticated; so has the summer outing. There are a couple of boys across the street who illustrate my point exactly. Those two boys have pitched a small tent on the lawn and there they enjoy all the roughness of camp life—but with ma and home right at hand. I watched the little fellows pitching their tent. Or, I might say that I watched a dog watch the boys. Now if anybody says anything about dog watch I'll brain him with a biscuit."

"Did the dog sleep in the tent with the boys?" inquired the pretty teacher.

"That's what I wanted to find out," replied the bow-legged boarder. "It was certain that the dog expected to be in on it from the supervisory air he had as he watched the construction. He sat down and watched and stood up and watched and observed from all angles and went in and out as if he were a home builder watching to see whether his contractors did their work right."

"Yesterday morning very early I happened to see the dog emerge from the tent and stretch and yawn a very satisfied yawn. You couldn't keep the boys from letting the dog in on it."

"Of course not; it wouldn't do at all," agreed Stews. "Without a dog and fleas and things like that it would not be tenting by any means."

HUNS MAKE A RAID ON THE EAST COAST

London, July 22. — Another raid on the east coast was made this morning by a squadron of from fifteen to twenty-one airplanes. They dropped bombs which, according to an official report, killed eight persons and injured twenty-five.

"A squadron of enemy airplanes, from fifteen to twenty-one, approached Felixstowe and Harwich at 8 o'clock this morning. Some bomb were dropped, but the heavy fire from the anti-aircraft defense caused the enemy's formation to split up, part returning overseas and part proceeding south, down the Essex coast."

"The latter party was heavily engaged by gunfire all down the Essex coast, and finally proceeded homeward without dropping any more bombs. The raiders were pursued out to sea and heavily engaged by our airplanes but the visibility was low and the difficulties of observation were very great."

"The casualties at Felixstowe and Harwich, so far, are eight killed and twenty-five injured."
