LATE SENATOR TILLMAN
A UNIQUE CHARACTER

Had Been a Member of the United States Senate Continuously for Twenty-Four Years --- Always Attracted Attention When He Rose to Speak --- Shattered All the Traditions of the Senate

Benjamin Ryan Tillman was one of the most extraordinary members of the United States Senate, in which body he served continuously for twenty-four years. During the latter part of his service he was chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate and his work in that position, after the United States entered the great war, was considered by his colleagues to be of great value.

As a Senator Mr. Tillman quickly won a wide reputation through the country for plainness and bluntness of speech, which, combined with his apparent rough exterior and somewhat careless manner of dress, made him a unique figure in Congress. No one attracted more attention when he rose to speak in the Senate. His language was always dramatic and he called things by their simplest names. He often referred to himself as the cornfield lawyer, but it was believed he did so only for the purpose of showing how little some of the lawyers knew on some of the intricate questions where common sense was more desirable than legal technicalities.

Nicknamed "Pitchfork Ben"

Within a month after he took his seat in the Senate, following his first election to that body in 1894, Senator Tillman won his picturesque nickname of "Pitchfork Ben," a characterization which he did not resent. In his first speech he shattered all the traditions of the Senators by taking the floor so soon after becoming a member and further indicated his disregard of these Senatorial usages by announcing himself to be "a farmer, pure and simple with no collateral occupation," and declaring his intention of holding up some of the public questions on his pitchfork.

While the impression made upon some of his colleagues was not altogether favorable, his methods convinced them that he was a vigorous fighter and a personality to be reckoned with so long as South Carolina should continue to send him to the Senate. His intimate knowledge of the best in literature showed that he was not the uncultured man the Senators had pictured him, despite the brusque manner and outspoken ways.

Mr. Tillman's career in the Senate was full of interesting episodes, prominent among which was his exchange of blows with his colleague, Senator McLaurin, over an incident which occurred in the executive session, which cost him an invitation by President Roosevelt to meet Prince Henry of Battenburg at a White House dinner. Other incidents were a sharp conflict with Mr. Roosevelt partly growing out of a dispute over the disposition of Southern Pacific Railroad lands in Oregon, and Senator Tillman's persistent and ultimately successful fight against President Roosevelt's appointment of Dr. Crum, a negro, as collector of the Port of Charleston.

Showed Political Strength

Although of advanced age, Senator Tillman gave evidences of his ability to retain his office by engaging in a fiery political contest with Mr. Bleasoe, formerly Governor, who was a candidate against him in the Senatorial primaries of 1918. The Senator had previously announced his intention

YANKEES' TASTE FOR SWEETS IS SURPRISING

London, July 8.—"Next for candy," calls the keeper of the ship's canteen. In front of his booth is a long queue of American soldiers, patiently awaiting their turn to buy the sweets and souvenirs displayed on the counter and in the showcases. It is an incident of the life of American soldiers on a transport bound for France.

The canteen-keeper is tired. Never in his experience on British vessels has he encountered such a rush of business. He has sold his wares in all the seven seas to people of many nationalities, and if he were awarding a prize to the best customer it would be bestowed promptly on the American soldier.

"I say," he exclaimed to the chief steward after he had closed shop the first day out, "what a sweet tooth they have! At the rate they're buying me out there won't be a gumdrop left by the time we get halfway over."

On some of the British transports that are taking Uncle Sam's troops to France there are as many as five canteens. The demand for chocolates is so great that the supply, large though it may have been, is quickly exhausted. American chewing gum is next in popularity. After the home variety of confections have been sold out the soldiers begin to experiment with the British sweets, of which toffee wins perhaps the most favor. If American, "pop" could be had, it would be consumed in large quantities. Failing that, the troops drink Spanish ale.

One soldier is known to have spent $15 for candy and ginger ale in the trip across. He probably would have spent more before the ship reached port, but one day, greatly to his astonishment, he became seasick.

to retire from politics, but he reconsidered that determination in the belief that his intimate knowledge of naval affairs would be of service to the country in time of war.

THE DANGER OF THIN BLOOD

If Not Corrected in Its Early Stages Consumption May Follow

In no disease is delay or neglect more dangerous than anaemia, a poverty of blood. It is very common in young girls and in persons who are overworked or confined within doors. It makes its approach in so stealthy a manner that it is often well developed before its presence is recognized.

But taken in time there is a specific, a tonic medicine which increases the number of red blood corpuscles thus enabling the blood to carry the life-giving oxygen to all the tissues of the body. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had unbounded success in the treatment of this stubborn disease because of this wonderful property. The correction of anaemic conditions by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is as certain as anything in medical sciences. Miss Jessie McLean, Trenton, N. S., says—"I was as weak as it was possible for any one to be, and yet be able to go about. My blood seemed to have turned almost to water. I was pale, the least exertion would leave me breathless, and when I went up stairs I would have to stop and rest on the way. I often had severe headaches, and at times my heart would palpitate alarmingly. A good friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I have reason to be grateful that I took the advice. Soon after beginning the use of the Pills I began to get stronger and by the time I had taken seven boxes I felt that I was again enjoying good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blessing to weak girls and I shall always warmly recommend them."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THIS GERMAN IS MISTAKEN

(Boston Record.)

Herr Hoffman, Socialist member of the Prussian Chamber of Deputies, errs when he says that Germany has "uselessly sacrificed 500,000 men since March 21." The destruction of 500,000 Germans is a useful achievement.

This has been a great drive! Half a million men or more thrown to death in a futile attempt to disrupt forces which cannot be beaten. Suppose the destruction of these 500,000 Germans had brought Paris to the Hun and set aflame the beautiful city, ripped the Louvre in pieces, thrown down, stone by stone, Notre Dame, and strewn the streets with the mangled bodies of old men; suppose the dead bodies of these 500,000 Germans had made a highway for their fellow-countrymen to walk upon to the Channel. Still the Hun would be the frenzied futility that he is today. Still the dream of world empire by Prussia would be blasted.

There can be no victory for such a monstrous purpose as Prussia's; no peace resting on the rotten foundations of German desire. The Prussian conquest was marked at birth with the red scar of disaster; and disaster stalks its way into the heart of Germany by such processes and along such windin' paths as fate decrees. But the end is inevitable, and in it there is no sound of the German voice but the whisper of German surrender.

Meantime, the destruction of 500,000 Germans is not a useless thing, though it serves not at all the hope of the Hun.

WAR REVEALS
NEW DISEASE

London—The war has revealed to scientists another new disease.

It's meningoencephalitis. Its common or garden name is "inflammation of the brain."

But just because someone you know is a "nut" is no sign he has meningoencephalitis—it isn't that kind of a disease.

Although it affects the brain, it results from a number of causes such as food poisoning, gas poisoning, bodily injury, alcoholism, or the reaction from various fevers, particularly influenza.

The new disease is so similar in symptoms and causes to botulism, a nerve disease due to uncooked food which has effected many soldiers and civilians that many physicians thought it was identical until recently.

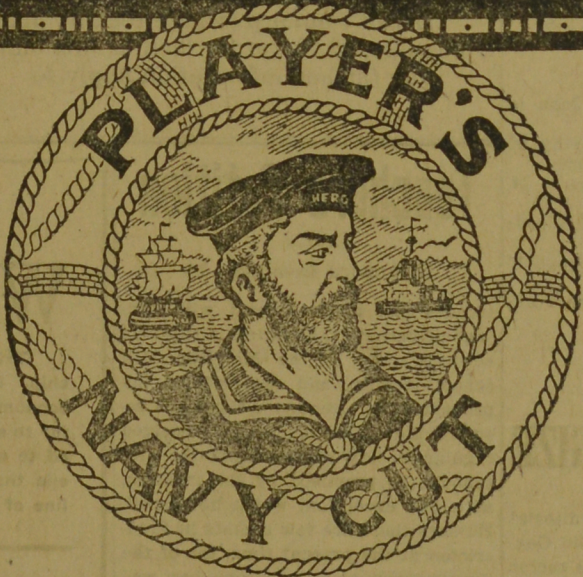

Its symptoms seem to be drowsiness and lack of use of the legs, and very frequently it is fatal.

The investigations now being carried on may reveal some microbe as the cause of the disease.
