HUN INTRIGUE AND ROUMANIA

Letter From the Austrian Emperor to King Ferdinand of Roumania Made Public.

London, May 31.—A private and secret letter written to King Ferdinand of Roumania by Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary, in the latter part of February marked the turning point in Roumania's participation in the world war and was one of the deciding factors in the long series of intrigues which eventually broke the spirit of the Roumanian king. Under this outside pressure King Ferdinand changed from an ardent supporter of the war against Germany into a luke warm and vacillating opportunist and finally into a distinct peace advocate.

"This is a time when Kings must stick together" this is the most striking sentence of Emperor Charles. The letter has never been published in its existence up to this time has been known to only a few persons outside the highest court circles in Roumania. A summary of its contents was com-

THERE ARE UNREASONABLE HUSBANDS

(Chicago News.)

"My husband," declared the kind-faced knitter when her turn came to tell her family affairs, "is the greatest man you ever saw to complain of his possessions being disturbed. He says he can't keep a thing about the house."

"What the dickens is all this junk?" he yells, when he finds I have a little of my correspondence on his desk and a list or two of groceries or some sewing material or garden seed that I intend to buy the next time I am down town, and perhaps a pattern or two and some bills and a sample of cloth. He wants to know why I can't keep my things on my own desk and leave his alone.

"He is a very unreasonable man. He will never understand women folk and their ways, I fear. Nor the children either."

"He never can understand why little Gladys, only six, should take a notion to copy the names of hymns out of the hymn book and leave that on his desk for him to puzzle over when he comes home and begins to make a few of his own high-brow jottings. They are rather puzzling names, such as Addison, Jehosaphat, Redhead and so forth."

"He doesn't know that they are not some of his own horrid notes until I make the matter plain to him that our baby has been copying names from the hymn book just for fun. Isn't Redhead in the hymn book? An any rate Gladys had written some names."

"With that much proved against us, he assumes that everything he misses has been taken by the children. He has a scientific turn of mind and has been investigating poisons and the effects of alkaloids or alkalis on locomotor ataxia, and it sounds odd to hear him bawling about his rattlesnake, declaring that someone has disturbed the reptile. He says a man of science has some rights and demands that his rattlesnake be left alone."

"That's just like my husband!" declared the woman who was next in turn. "My husband is a strong man and his den is full of all kinds of weights and measures that he lifts up and shoves around and which would go right through the floor if he ever dropped one."

"He has certain times for taking these exercises, but growls that he can never find his exercises and when he does find them that they are away back behind something so low and so wide that it takes him half an hour to fish them out, which consumes all the time he has to devote to exercising."

"Yesterday he alarmed the whole neighborhood by accusing the baby of carrying off his hundred pound weight. The bay likes to throw combs, brushes, button hooks and that sort of thing out of a window, but never had any intention of disturbing her father's weights, and would never do such a thing, I'm sure. But men like my husband are just so unreasonable!"

One Thing Forgotten.

"Since your son came home from college, I suppose he is strong for all kinds of uplift stuff?"

"Well, he is strong for raising a rumpus, but never makes any effort to try to help uplift the mortgage."

Love may be blind, but the average mother-in-law isn't.

municated to the American minister and to the Associated Press correspondent in Jassy by a high official, who is one of the most steadfast friends of the Allies at the Roumanian court. In intimate tones the Emperor directed the attention of King Ferdinand to the great danger for all monarchical institutions from the wave of socialism which was sweeping eastern Europe. He drew a heartfelt picture of the danger to Austria from the spread of Bolshevism, across the Russian border and declared the Roumanian dynasty was in equal danger from the same source.

Emperor Charles concluded with an invitation for the King to join with the other monarchies in Europe in the death grapple with democracy and promised that if Ferdinand would abandon the attacks Germany and Austria would support him in retaining his throne. After portraying Roumania as abandoned by the Allies and helpless before the powerful central powers, Emperor Charles closed his letter with the sentence quoted above

ONE MORE ADDED TO THE GREAT ARMY

Who Are Shouting the Praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Saskatchewan Man's Kidney Trouble Developed Into Diabetes—Story of His Complete Cure.

Strong Pine, Sask., June 7th.—(Special.)—Sore back, which developed into diabetes, had made life a burden to Maxim F. Capusten, a farmer of this place. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, and he is added to that great army of Canadians who glory in telling their neighbors that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure remedy for all kidney ills.

"For nearly five years I suffered from sore back and headache," Mr. Capusten says, in giving his experience. "I had a bad taste in my mouth in the mornings, and I was always tired. My muscles would cramp, and I was nervous, and the least exertion would make me perspire freely. At last diabetes developed."

"I finally came to the conclusion that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, and decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I got half a dozen boxes and before I had finished taking them I was completely cured."

"I advise anyone suffering as I did to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

All Mr. Capusten's troubles came from diseased kidneys. They speedily ceased when he commenced to use the one sure help for diseased kidneys—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Playing Safe.

"You have planted mostly onions and radishes."

"Yes," said Mr. Crosslots. "Nobody at our house eats them, so if they don't happen to grow it won't make any difference."

After a man tires of amusements he calls them follies.
