THE KAISER BOASTED OF WAR PLOT

Prof. Schofield Says Emperor Asserted His Policy was To Make the World Afraid

(Chicago News)

Prof. William H. Schofield of Harvard university drew a picture of the kaiser to-day for a thousand men and women who crowded the Association of Commerce banquet room in the La-Salle hotel. The professor had known talked, laughed, argued with this "imitation Satan." He had been exchange professor in the University of Berlin. And while the audience laughed, cheered and applauded he talked to them of the William Hohenzollern he had known, the affable egomaniac who ten years ago had babbled for an hour and a half in the palace drawing room of "the will to conquer and the ambition to rule the world."

"He was a man engaging and with a sense of humor, a human being, interested in clothes, and art and literature. We talked on this, our first meeting, of everything under the sun. I found him a man more keen and alert and with a brain more focused on the thought in hand than any man I had ever encountered. But he had not overcome or outgrown his greatest, political fault—that of indiscretion."

Planned to Use Catholics and Jews
"He talked to me of the manner in which he was going to use the Catholics and the Jews and the Scandinavians to further his own world dreams. It never dawned on him that I might think he was intending to use me, as he was. He was neither arrogant nor conceited as such things are usually understood. But in him was an arrogance greater than the common vanity. Our subsequent talks all gave me this same impression. His mind never fumbled and his thought was always consecutive."

"On one occasion, the emperor's birthday—most notable affairs these birthdays were—we met for the last time. I have seen him since, but not so intimately. On this occasion he stopped Mrs. Schofield and me as we were leaving the foyer of the opera hall. He talked more seriously than before. But it was always in him to pass compliments and he remarked as usual upon Mrs. Schofield's appearance. He was always interested in the appearance of women. He stationed guards at the entrance of the opera to see that no women attended who were not in low neck gowns.

"Make the Nations Afraid"
"Well, this time the impression that was being growing in me during our talks was vividly climaxed. There is to the kaiser a genial, affable and engaging side. He is human. He jokes. He loves arguments and he is alert with the vitality of an almost superman. But there is also to him a side that differs from his side as hell differs from heaven. And in our last talk I saw the other side. I saw a man in whose soul was the unfaltering conviction that he was an instrument of the Almighty. He said to me:

"And remember this one thing doctor, the secret of the policy of Germany: Keep the world in doubt and stimulate fear. That is my motto. Keep the nations uneasy and make them afraid so that Germany may have her will, which is the will of the Almighty."

He said this to me with a face intent and serious. He then summed up the arguments he had made to me for I was to go back to my country as one of his unconscious propagandists. Germany wanted to regulate the world for its own good and for the superior good and aggrandizement of the German nation. He talked of the future. He said, "There will be conscription in your country some time," I could not imagine it then. And then he talked of the desolation that war brought, of the miseries and devastations.

"Germany shall never know these," he said. "I am for peace, peace, but only the peace which shall come when the world coincides with the will of Germany. Other nations shall know this devastation, you may be sure, if it happens, but not mine."

Dr. Schofield paused and concluded: "I was in Berlin at the time of Roosevelt's visit. And let me tell you one thing—there was only one man among all the public men of the world whom the kaiser feared and that man was Theodore Roosevelt. He feared him and admitted it once to me and said that that man stood between him and the future. And, without political interest, I wish to tell you that there was rejoicing in Germany when Mr. Roosevelt was not elected to the presidency of the United States."

Cheers that shook the room followed this remark. The applause thundered for five minutes and was repeated as often as the speaker mentioned again the name of Roosevelt, "the man whom the kaiser feared."

"This," said the doctor, "is the first time I have spoken about the kaiser in public." Dr. Schofield has a gold star on his service flag at home. His son, in the aviation force, was killed by a fall several days ago.

IMPORTANT POINTS IN HATCHING

During the hatching season the poultry house and particularly the nest should be kept clean. Clean water and a supply of whole grain should be accessible to the setters and a dust bath also should be provided. If more than one hatch is being taken off clean out and disinfect the nest after each hatch and put in new sod and fresh litter. Dust the hen with insect powder before putting her in the nest and again a day or two before leaving the nests with the chickens. It is a good plan to put into the dust bath a little dry sulphur or ground tobacco.

Be sure also that the house is free from mites. These little pests get into the cracks and corners of the building and at night, as the hens are resting, they come out of their hiding place, get on the hen's body and it does not take very many of them to make a hen so uneasy that she cannot set. In some cases the mites become so troublesome that they actually worry the hens to death.

How to Get Rid of Mites.

Clean out the house and thoroughly sweep, not forgetting the windows, walls and ceiling. When this is all swept out clean, use a garden hose or a stiff brush and hot water. See that everything in the cracks and crevices is washed out. After this is done allow the house to dry for a while and if everything then appears to be clean, use a good disinfectant and be sure that the solution is forced by the spray or brush right into the cracks and crevices. If the mites are bad, use boiling hot water followed by coal oil and a liquid lice killer or lice paint. Be sure that this goes into the cracks and crevices and when you have gone over your house thoroughly according to the above treatment in all probability the mites will be exterminated, but it is advisable in the course of three or four days again to inspect for the mites and perhaps to repeat the dose once more.

Basic Facts About Belting

AND PARTICULARLY

Dunlop "Gibraltar RedSpecial" Frictioned-Surface Transmission Belting

A Worthy Product

Years of careful study of the high-power belt problem have enabled Dunlop Laboratory experts to create "Gibraltar RedSpecial" Belting, the original Red Face Rubber Belting of Canada—a product worthy of the Dunlop Factories and of the quarter-century record of success back of them.

"Gibraltar RedSpecial" Virtues Are Real

Dunlop "Gibraltar RedSpecial" Belting is to-day widely used in a multitude of ways in the many varied industries in this country. It owes its success, not to any illogical deductions or fantastic analyses, but to the simplest causes—causes so simple that they are now, always have been, and always will be, in our opinion, the bedrock of success in belt-making—Power, Speed, Service—in actual use as well as in the test-room.

Permanent Elasticity Means "Life" in Belting

In producing this new, this original, this master, red belt, our object has been to have the friction coat of rubber between the plies such as will retain its life indefinitely, and to have a quality of rubber with long "fingers," and not a quality of rubber the elasticity of which has been sacrificed to obtain the so-called high-pulling test.

That "Friction Pull"

When you are informed that such-and-such a belt has a "friction-pull" of abnormal poundage, do not imagine that you are getting a quality friction. What you have to secure in a belt is a friction full of elasticity. There must be between the plies of duck only a certain class of rubber to give uniform strength and pliability.

Resilient Quality Must Not Be Sacrificed To Excess of Friction Strength

To obtain high figures, such as referred to above, in belt frictions you have to take away from the elasticity of the friction: hence, there is a happy medium, and this medium we have obtained through our laboratory experts. It ensures for you a belt, the friction of which will hold the plies together and will be sufficiently elastic in its properties to allow for the give and take necessary in rounding the pulleys.

Universal Recognition of "Gibraltar RedSpecial"

To cite the names of users of this famous, red frictioned-surface belt would necessitate the use of much space. We have on file recommendations from almost every type of industry requiring "Gibraltar RedSpecial" Belting in widths varying from 1½" to 48". These testimonials are available for your perusal at any time.

The Original "Red"

"Gibraltar RedSpecial," as noted previously, is the Original Red Rubber Belt—and like most things that are original, its success is of the kind that endures.

Duck Finest Obtainable, Made to Highest Specifications

A highly important feature of "Gibraltar RedSpecial" is the duck which enters into its construction. Only the finest quality of specially-selected duck, having the proper tensile strength in the right direction, is used. And this, in combination with a superior rubber friction between the plies, ensures absolute uniformity of service.

Fills The Bill

"Gibraltar RedSpecial" Belting is to be found in practically every industry in Canada, and if it is Power, Speed and Service that you want, then it is "Gibraltar RedSpecial" Frictioned-Surface Belting that you require for your work.

THE KAISER AND GOD.

"I rejoice with you in Wilhelm's first victory. How magnificently God supported him!"—Telegram from the kaiser to the crown princess.

Led by Wilhelm, as you tell, God has done extremely well; You with patronizing nod Show that you approve of God. Kaiser, face a question new—This—does God approve of you?

Broken pledges, treaties torn, Your first page of war adorn; We on fouler things must look Who read further in that book, Where you did in time of war All that you in peace foresore, Where you, barbarously wise, Bade your soldiers terrorize, Where you made—the deed was fine—Women screen your firing line, Villages burned down to dust, Torture, murder, bestial lust, Filth too foul for printer's ink, Crimes from which the apes would shrink—

Strange the offerings that you press On the God of Righteousness! Kaiser, when you'd decorate Sons or friends who serve your State Not that Iron Cross bestow But a Cross of Wood, and so—So remind the world that you Have made Calvary anew.

Kaiser, when you'd kneel in prayer Look upon your hands and there Let that deep and awful stain From the blood of children slain Burn your very soul with shame, Till you dare not breathe that Name That now you glibly advertise—God as one of your allies.

Impious braggart, you forget; God is not your conscript yet; You shall learn in dumb amaze That His ways are not your ways, That the mire through which you trod Is not the high white road of God,

To Whom, whichever way the combat rolls, We, fighting to the end, commend our souls.

BYNG IS BEST OF GENERALS TO ONE VILLAGE

London, March 28. (By mail).—Every Sunday at the little church of BeBaumont, Essex, the vicar mounts the pulpit and reads out the names of those in the district who are fighting their country's battle. Among them is Julian Byng — just plain Julian Byng.

The great general's home is a mile or so away, at the village of Thorpe-le-Soken, and it was just a year ago that he was last home there on a few days' leave. He spent much of his time dressed in an old suit felling trees. The people on the estate look with a good deal of awe on that axe now. It is a pretty big one, and takes an abnormally strong man to wield it—in fact it is a weapon which even the lusty young men who dwell there in times of peace would have preferred to leave well alone.

At the general's last homecoming he and Lady Byng walked the half mile to their house. The motor has been given up since the war and the general and his wife would not even allow themselves the luxury of a horse vehicle. At that time he was in command of the Canadian Corps at Ypres, where, as everybody knows, he was the idol of his men.

One day there came to Thorpe-le-Soken the chaplain general of the Canadian forces—Canon John Almond, and he made a speech. It was a moving speech, and one mentions one passage in it with diffidence, because it touches on a side of the general's character which in normal times one would regard as sacred. But in these days, when the whole attention of the people of the Empire and its soldiers are concentrated on this great leader, the words of the chaplain general come as a noble inspiration and example. He said:

"No wonder Byng is such a success. No wonder the men adore him. For when the men were ready to go over the parapet, when everything had been done that could be done to obtain success, Sir Julian went down on his knees and prayed for God's help."

The chaplain said that no man had done more to keep Canada a part of the Empire than Sir Julian.

I have come across some striking evidence of the general's devotion to his men and his regard for their comfort and well-being.

ON LOST WORDS.

(Boston Record.)

When you and me Read the lost and Found ads., and we Come across this Familiar one—Lost—On Shakmeup Car, bleak leather Wallet, containing $300 in bills and Valuable papers. E. Z. Looz, 245 Liberal reward. Stogie avenue. We say, "Well now, Anybody that would Carry that amount Of coin on them, Loose like that, Ought to lost it," etc. That's the sympathy We have for the Unfortunate gink. But—if you and Me ever lose a Wad, do we ever Figure it out for Ourselves the same As we do for the Other unlucky guy? Oh, no! That's Different. But Anyhow, everybody who Reads our pathetic ad. Says, "What a darn fool He must be to carry All that money on him, He ought to lose it," etc.

ORNITHOLOGICAL.

Not many years ago a man Was always called a guy, And later he was called a gink, No one on earth knows why; But, here of late, we all have used A more euphonious word; A man, no matter who he is, Is nowadays a bird.
