DAYLIGHT SAVING.

In an article dealing with the important subject of daylight saving, the Montreal Journal of Commerce has this to say:

"How prone people are to see danger in every proposed change was well illustrated in the case of the proposal for the adoption of the time arrangement commonly spoken of as 'daylight saving.' In some cases where the new system was voluntarily adopted for certain districts, it was soon abandoned, because neighboring districts rejected it, and embarrassment ensued. When the proposal was made in Parliament to adopt the system for all Canada, very strong objection was taken especially by representatives of some farming sections of the country. But when the measure went into operation the anticipations of trouble were not realized. The clocks were set to the new system and in a few days people forgot that there had been any change. In cities and towns the additional hour of daylight was a substantial advantage. In the country districts the system does not appear to have produced any disadvantage. The farmers arranged their work to suit themselves and did not worry about the clock.

"The experiment which so many people looked upon with doubt appears to be an unqualified success. On the 31st of October Canada will return to the old system. In the United States the date for the return is October 27. If anything can be done to have the change made in both countries at the same moment, that would be a very desirable position. Uniformity of action between Canada and the States is found to be an advantage in many things at present. This is one of the cases in which simultaneous action would be convenient."

PRAISE FOR CANADIANS.

Writing from field headquarters of the British army, Charles H. Grasty sends the following to his newspaper, the New York Times:

The Canadian exploits must make every North American heart thrill. They are Americans with four years' experience in war, and nobody else quite plays the game up to their glory. They can fight as individuals or in organized units, afoot or horseback. They are as practical as they are brave and every man jack of them is in the pink of condition.

Troops who travel alongside of them have their work cut out. General Currie seems to carry light railways in his pocket, and if the Canadians have to stop anywhere for a day or two, transportation facilities spring up behind them as if by magic. Germans will go miles out of their way to avoid the Canucks.

Whenever you speak to a Canadian officer about their characteristics, he invariably comes back with some such remark as: "There's nothing we do that you can't do when your troops get the hang of it, and you won't be long about it either. We are all Americans together."

One splendid result of this war is the establishment of a North American brotherhood.

Our Canadian boys, by their splendid work in France, have shed lustre on their country and all have reason to be proud of them. They are now fighting side by side with their American cousins, and, as a contemporary points out, the "brotherhood of service" that will endure on this continent will be one of the greatest blessings of the war.

The campaign for the saving of gasoline by cutting out Sunday joy riding seems to be taking a hold in Canada. It is perhaps a little late to start such a campaign to expect tangible results, but the idea is a good one. Some people may be a little slow to interpret the true meaning of the term "joy riding." If it is a case of saving gasoline, the man who motors to church with his family ought to take the hint just as readily as the fellow who takes his family and his friends for a jaunt into the country.

Boston Globe: American casualties to the number of 25,910 show that the Americans have taken a considerable part in the great drive that is pushing the Germans back.

Sydney Record: Kapitan-Lieutenant Paul Wagenfukr, the German submarine commander who endeavored to drown all the crew of the Belgian Prince by putting them on the deck of his craft and then submerging, was himself lost with his vessel a few days afterwards. That is unfortunate. He deserved hanging like any other murderer.

Hamilton Herald: General Korniloff has been killed again—by a shell this time. On other occasions he was killed with bullets and died from exposure and exhaustion. Bye-and-bye the general will be qualified to decide by which method he prefers to die.

Savannah News: It does seem like the irony of history in the light of 1812 that the United States now asks England to draft Americans over there to fight for the cause of the mother as well as the daughter country.

Detroit News: The man who knows all about the war is wasting his time here. The generals in France would like to meet him. They admit they learn something every day.

The London Daily Express claims to have unquestionable information that the former Empress of Russia and her four daughters have been murdered by Bolsheviks.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Can a few baseballs for use after the war.

And can all the baseball slang, too.

We're beginnin' to feel real sassy toward the iceman.

'Member that summer when the hot weather lasted up till October?

Those summer furs ought to come in real convenient.

The German army is getting homesick.

Lots of high steppers overstep themselves.

A little man imagines that his contrariness is will power.

If a girl can't marry her ideal, the next best thing to do is to marry some other girl's.

There are a lot more people who can stand prosperity than ever got an opportunity to.

Many a man with a loud voice has a dent where his bump of intelligence ought to be.

If a woman is unable to think of anything else to say, she repeats what she said to other people.

Just because Prince Rupprecht is going home to be married is no reason why he should take his army back with him.

Some of Germany's most capable fiction writers are now engaged in war work. They are writing the daily war news for the newspapers.

Recent editions of men's shirts have the terminal facilities shortly abbreviated, but whether this is due to the boll weevil or the war the haberdasher saith not.

At Hoyt

The Poultry Club had a very good turn out at Hoyt Station, about 150 persons coming out to see the poultry and pigs. There were 217 chickens and 8 pigs on exhibition. The pigs were a very good class of animals being pure bred Chester Whites. The people of Hoyt Station show a great interest in the clubs and were very successful in this case. The Women's Institute gave a big supper free of charge to all. Harry Patterson and Nina Smith of Hoyt won the majority of the prizes and showed very good classes of poultry to which they had given good care in breeding and raising.

The different members of the club without exception are building new houses or altering those they already have for their poultry.
