On June 22nd every person residing in Canada, male or female, British or alien, of sixteen years or over, must attend one of the registration booths located in his or her district, and there observe the procedure explained below.

Where to Register

Every person required to register has the privilege of registering at any of the public places provided for that purpose. The location of all such places will be specified in proclamations posted conspicuously.

In Cities and Towns, many of these places will be open for registration purposes prior to Registration day. Where such arrangements are made, the local papers will supply full information.

Large industrial and business concerns are being asked to provide facilities for registering their employees. Where they do so business will not be interfered with, and employees will suffer no loss of time.

While all are compelled to register on Registration Day, it is not contemplated by the Government to force the sick, feeble and aged to turn out. If such persons will notify the Registrar prior to June 22nd of their inability to attend at a place of registration, an effort will be made to register them at home, provided the request is reasonable and justified.

Remember the Day—June 22nd—Remember the Hours—7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Register early and get your Certificate for your own protection.

MR. PARSONS DEFENDS PRESENT FISCAL YEAR

great national interests of this country. It should be remembered that the present tariff with changes here and there, was enacted as a great national policy, not for the benefit of any one class but for the well being of the nation at large. No one who is not ignorant of the subsequent history of our dominion can say that it has not justified its existence. An enormous revenue has to be raised in any case and in no other way can the amount produced by the tariff be raised so easily. Manufacturers feel that the tariff could and should be changed here and there, and so amended that it would apply more scientifically than it does at the present time. For this and other reasons the manufacturers would like to see created what might be termed a trade and tariff board; such a board be composed of representative men of actual experience and wide knowledge of commercial conditions and whose broad outlook and vision it would fit them particularly for the proper study of these great questions so vital to our national interests; this board to report to the government from time to time their findings, and if after a full and complete survey of the situation it can clearly be established that the tariff is inimical to the best interests of the country at large; nay, more than that, if it is not actually essential from a national standpoint, then I say away with the tariff.

The Tariff Question

"The time has arrived when we must all face this matter in a sincere and broad minded fashion. It surely cannot be simply a matter of give and take as between manufacturers on the one hand and grain growers on the other. Labor, the transportation interests, the great financial institutions wholesale and retail business, producers controlling our mines, forests, and fisheries, are all vitally interested in the question of the tariff and must clearly have a voice as to its retention or otherwise. In giving each proposition to the convictions of manufacturers in this manner we should at the same time be glad to meet the grain growers of the west and would do our part to try and bring about a conference to be held a little later in the season in the city of Winnipeg.

"We would, however, be altogether insincere and dishonest did we not state in general terms that if there is one thing more certain than another it is that manufacturers could not possibly exist in this country without the small measure of protection which the tariff affords them. Living alongside a populous country of highly specialised industries, catering to a home demand of twelve times as many people as we have in Canada, it would be suicidal for us to attempt to compete or develop our new country on the basis of free trade. Notwithstanding the enormous population of the United States and the great home makes that are open to them, they have found it necessary in their own interests, to retain a large measure of protection by means of the tariff.

Must Have Revenue

"At this particular time in our national history, when employment for returned soldiers is going to be a matter when the largest possible revenue must be obtained in all directions to carry our gigantic war debt, the question may fairly be asked: 'Is the farming industry languishing to such an extent that in order to help out there must be destroyed, or even impaired, its fellow industry, the manufacturing industry of this country?' 'Manufacturers, are however, quite tired of the abuse that is being heaped upon them from interested quarters. The profits of manufacturers generally speaking, have been grossly exaggerated and while here and there abnormal figures are shown (which are subsequently largely extracted by the business products) yet the large profits of the manufacturers also applies in the case of agriculturists. The great majority however, of these two classes as well as of all other classes in the country, are simply making reasonable and necessary headway."

The National Interests

Mr. Parsons then emphasized the large absence in men and money to the war effort of Canada, and said: "The time has arrived, therefore, when the government, members of parliament and the people at large must be fair to their country and not consider their interests as a football to be kicked about by interested politicians and others, otherwise, the national interests are sure to be adversely affected."

The speaker pointed out what had been done in Australia where the prime minister called manufacturers together in conference and outlined to them a very definite scheme, calling for their help and promising the cooperation of the government for the furtherance of industry.

"Great Britain realized that in order to hold her own as a nation and maintain her prosperity she had not only to do every thing possible to get hold of trade again, which she had temporarily lost during the war, but she must also put herself in a position to regain that which other nations, particularly Germany, had taken away from

TWO HUSBANDS KILLED IN WAR, WEDS A THIRD

London, June 12.—To have lost two husbands and married a third during the war has been the experience of Lady Michael Wardell, one of London's June brides.

She is a daughter of Sir Daniel Cooper, an Australian millionaire. She married first the late Viscount Northland, who lost his life on active service in 1915, and left a will in which he expressed the hope that his widow would marry again. She fulfilled this hope when she was married to Capt. Geoffrey Mills, who was killed a year ago.

Her third husband is also a British officer, holding a commission in the Royal Hussars.

her during recent years, largely on account of governmental direction and help.

After War Problems

"In Canada, however, not only had they received no direct help and lead from the government in connection with planning for industries, for the war, in the nations interests, but a considerable portion of the population was keeping the country in a foment of agitation which would tend to destroy rather than to build up. There was only one way to pay off our accumulated war debts, and the way is by producing in field, forest mine and factory all the products they could, and sell these products at as high a margin over the cost of production as we are asked to secure. It was opportune to say fairly, honestly that the average net return from the investment of capital in industry was not more than it should be to encourage men to take the risks incident thereto. Further while here and there large profits had been made by manufacturers as was also the case of agriculturists and other classes, yet the history of the past generation showed thousands of abandoned industrial enterprises in which men have lost their all, just as there have been abandoned farms that were not made to pay."

Concluding Mr. Parsons said: "The old world countries are already taking steps to make themselves more self-contained and self-supporting in the matter of foodstuffs. It may not be a long time, therefore, before the agriculturists of this country realize that they must depend more largely than ever upon the home markets. To this end manufacturing industries, if encouraged, should be established all through the west as soon as the population is able to take care of them and raw materials may be secured. No nation can become great that is concerned solely with agriculture.

"There is said to be a condition existing among the truck farmers and gardeners of the east whereby they may receive only an average of thirty five cents as their portion of every dollars worth of products sold. If this is correct, it is a wrong that should be righted and for this purpose the facilities of our association would be placed at the disposal of those interested."
