PATRIOTIC PROGRAM—HOLDING THE HOME LINES
CARRYING ON

Big Lectures with Big Messages About the Great War.

"THE TRAGEDY OF ARMENIA AND SYRIA" Stirring Lecture by Dr. Frederick G. Coan.The "OLD HOMESTEAD" QUARTET. Third Day at Chautauqua"ROBIN HOOD" by far Most Popular American Opera. Fifth Evening at Chautauqua.

"Robin Hood" is perhaps the biggest single attraction ever given on any Chautauqua program. If Chautauqua patrons were pleased with the "Chimes of Normandy" and "Mikado" in previous years, they will be more than delighted with "Robin Hood." Many remember the famous songs—"Then Hey! For the Merry Greenwood," "Brown October Ale," "Come Dream So Bright," "Tinkers' Chorus," "Oh, Promise Me," "Come Away to the Woods," "Ho! Ho! Then for Jollity," "Ye Birds in Azure Wing," "Armorer's Song," "A Hunting We Will Go," "Ah! I Do Love You," "Sweetheart My Own," "Love, We Never More Will Part," and others. Chautauqua will be the place to hear them in the opera "Robin Hood" presented in full cast.

Secretary of War Baker Says of Chautauqua

"I am constantly facing the splendid results of the work done by the Chautauqua in this country in creating and sustaining a sound patriotic feeling, and in carrying forward the great national enterprises which the government is necessarily bringing to the attention of our people; and I want you to know that as an officer of the government I not only appreciate the importance of the lecture platform as a means of communication and expansion, but also appreciate the work which you and your associates are doing as a contribution to our national cause."

THE NICE YOUNG MEN WHO USED TO CALL ON AUNT ARETHUSA

(Chicago News.)

"While I think of it," began Aunt Arethusa, as her niece and nephew sat at the dinner table, "I wish to remark that I don't exactly like the young man who spent so much time in the living room here last evening."

"Why Auntie Arethusa!" exclaimed the blue eyed niece. "You don't mean Wallie Keats!"

"If that's his name he's the one I am speaking of," replied Aunt Arethusa in a tone that suggested a decided drop in the temperature.

"You can't mean Wallie Keats, auntie, dear," said her nephew and favorite, politely. "Why, auntie, Wallie Keats is a fine chap. A regular fellow and everything. I don't see what objection you have to Wallie."

"There you are, Aunt Arethusa," said the niece. "Our own little Harvey my brother, and your favorite nephew fully recommends the young man. You know how strict brother is. He disliked Homer Dibbs, and Charlie Squig and several other friends I had, and I dropped their acquaintance immediately. If brother objects to my entertaining Wallie I'd lose no time in dropping him."

"He's altogether too exuberant," replied Aunt Arethusa. "He just sat at that piano and played this ragtime, as you call it, and sang about moonlight and love and the little girl in far off Hawaii that he will see again some day. Then he sang about the girl he loved in old New Hampshire, or some other place in the eastern states. It shows a very fickle nature on his part my dears."

"The young man of my day was of a much more refined and constant species. The evenings then were not spent in boisterous hilarity. No young man of that period would play the piano and sing as if he were in the throes of happiness."

"Maybe he wasn't" suggested the niece.

"When he called, on invitation, he would bring a good book, out of which could be garnered learned topics that would furnish conversational material until almost 9 o'clock, at which hour he would make his departure. Only on special occasions would one give way to trivialities and play a classical melody on the music box—a far more dignified musical mechanism, I may state, than your present phonograph which so lacks in the fitness of things that it will play a coon shouting quartet immediately after giving forth an operatic aria. Of course, that isn't the fault of the machine itself. The artistic crime can be laid at the door of the person who puts on the records."

"Then again, the young man of my day was altogether—"

"Isn't it too bad, Aunt Arethusa," sighed the niece, "that times have changed so? But I may train him to be quiet."

"Don't!" pleaded the girl's brother. "Wallie is an awfully nice fellow as he is and auntie will learn to like him. Besides, he couldn't get away with that costume drama stuff. To be popular now, auntie, one must be as nosy as a bowling alley."

SOME CLASS TO A MULE SKINNER

Camp Kearny, Cal., July 27.—If some of the professional men now in the army could hear their captains talk about their "actual worth" to "the outfit," their estimates of their own importance would change.

Two battery commanders had an argument recently, overhearing part of which the regimental adjutant undertook to adjust their differences.

"What's the difficulty?" asked the adjutant.

"He's trying to get a man away from my outfit," said Capt. No. 1.

"Well, I think I offered him a fair exchange," said Captain No. 2.

"Who's the man?" asked the adjutant.

"A mule skinner," said Capt. No. 1.

"What are you going to give him?" asked the adjutant.

"A banker, two salesmen and a lawyer," said Capt. No. 2.

SAILORS TODAY
NOT LIKE TARs
OF OTHER DAYS

(New York Sun.)

He was a real sailor, a jolly tar, tall and square and heavy and weather-beaten as though from years of service. He walked through the ferry-boat with a roll and a heave that almost made the Woman Who Saw Seasick. His hat was perched on his head at such an angle that one wondered how it stayed on. If mere women could learn this secret of hat anchorage from the middies, what an emancipation from hatpins!

Jack was evidently just off ship and his interest in everything and everybody was so infectious that the Woman Who Saw could not resist listening.

It wasn't a matter of eaves-dropping. What he said was shouted out as if he were in a gale instead of churning across the peaceful bay.

He told his companion—a landlubber—all about his voyage; he commented on the queer styles in hats and shoes. He found Governor's Island "considerably built up" since he last saw it. Finally his eyes found a group of naval recruits, evidently fresh from a training station.

They were shuffling, talking, showing each other about in the way of young cubs. They were remarkably spick and span—the creases still in their suits. Each one had a fountain pen fastened on the shield of his jacket directly at the point where the neck forms the V.

Jack watched them silently for a moment, then remarked drily to his companion:

"Say, do they arm these new fashioned sailors that way—with pens on their chests? It makes me tired! They turn out a sailor a minute nowadays, and they all wear wrist watches. They have to, for they can't tell a ship's bell from an alarm clock!"
