PARIS, April 6.-General Foch, the commander-in-chief and under whose orders more than one hundred thousand American troops are ready to aid the French and British, declares that the Boche tidal wave is broken. "All is going well," he adds, and expresses confidence in the future. As proof of his statement, is the fact that in the past two days the enemy has made only slight gains on a 38-mile front, and these have been equalized in part by Franco-British advances at some points.

The German attack along the French sector of the battlefront has ceased. Today's official statement says there was violent artillery fighting last night north and south of the Avre, but that no important actions occurred.

BRITISH POSITION IMPROVED BY A COUNTER ATTACK DELIVERED IN VICINITY OF HANGARD

The statement says: "The night was marked by violent bombardments north and south of the Avre, particularly in the region of Monchel, without infantry actions. On the right bank of the Meuse and in the forest of Aprimont the artillery fighting was rather severe at times. Two German raids, one north of Palmaney and the other near Suzey, were without result."

The British position south of the Comme was improved to some extent by a counter attack delivered in the neighborhood of Hangard late yesterday, according to the British War Office statement today. Along the whole front below Ayette, in the sector north of the Somme, the struggle continued with violence until late yesterday night. Although the Germans made incessant attacks, they met with no further success tha natlended their efforts in the morning.

THE GERMANS MADE AN ATTACK IN MASSED FORMATION THIS MORNING ON TOWN OF CORBIE

LONDON, April 6.- The Germans at daybreak this morning attacked the little town of Corbie, in the Valley of the Somme, Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reports., The enemy advanced in dense waves. The outcome was not known at the time the despatch was filed. The main German thrust, says the correspondent, appears to the west of Vaire wood, twoard the principal Amiens road.

An official statement by the War Office last night says: Fighting yesterday was on a considerable scale. The Germans employed twenty divisions, their attacking force being twice as great as that of the Anglo-French armies defending the line. Thus there was a much larger draft on the enemy eserves than those of the Allies. North of the Somme, at Albert, the enemy attack failed completely, and on the British front the enemy was held everywhere except at Hamel. South of the Somme the French were driven out of the angle formed rivers Avre and Luce. The enemy's object here is

WON GLORY AT VIMY RIDGE.

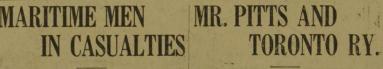

Speaking of Canada's response to the call of duty, he said: "My countrymen across the sea will never forget the immediacy with which Canada sprang to arms and offered herself for the common cause, led by a quiet, sure and immediate instinct of the issues involved in this struggle." He wondered whether Canadians adequately realized what their fellow-countrymen won for civilization at Vimy Ridge. A really priceless victory for the cause of the Allies. "Such a position of vital strategic value," he went on, "will never be surrendered by our armies.

He told them he himself had stood on Vimy Ridge "and seven German shells came at our devoted heads."

A loud applause greeted his declaration: "The old country has done its best. You know that. Out of 7,500,000 men raised in the kingdom for the defence of freedom, Old England had contributed not less than 60 per cent. Your own soldiers would say that if there is a cheerful, hard working, close sticking comrade, it is Mr. Thomas Atkins"
