THE CHEESE INDUSTRY.

When Hon. Mr. Tweeddale made the statement in the Legislature a few days ago to the effect that some of the cheese turned out of factories in this province was unfit for human consumption, some opposition members, hoping to be able to make political capital, tried to make it appear that the minister was casting reflections upon the farmers, and that there was no ground for his statement. A conference of cheese makers and wholesalers was held at Sussex on Friday last, and we find from a report of the proceedings published in the Standard that Hon. Mr. Tweeddale's statement was borne out by Mr. George Barr, the leading cheese expert of Canada, and also by the wholesalers from whom letters were read.

Here is an extract from the Standard's report:

The conference was addressed by George Barr, who is the leading cheese expert in Canada. Four boxes of cheese which had been purchased from the trade were used as samples. One of these was an Ontario product and the other three were New Brunswick made. Samples of two of the cheeses were tested by those present. The other two were declared by Mr. Barr to be unfit for human consumption. He pointed out that with the climatic conditions which existed in New Brunswick there was no reason why cheese should not be made here that would compare favorably with that of any part of the Dominion, and the only reason he could assign for the inferior quality of much of the product was the inefficiency and indifference of many of the makers, and the demand on the part of a great many of the farmers who took their milk to the cheese factories that too great a quantity of cheese should be manufactured out of the milk provided. He stated emphatically that no man could honestly make cheese of standard grade out of the amount of milk which some of the makers were forced to use. He also urged the need of better equipment and facilities if the best quality was to be produced.

A number of letters were read from various firms urging the necessity of something being done to improve the quality of the native cheese if it was to hold its place in the market. The representatives of wholesale houses present also expressed themselves along the same lines.

They suggested that all cheese be made under government supervision in order that the dealer might know just what he was purchasing, and agreed that if this were done, to discriminate in price between the first, second and third grades.

In bringing the matter to the notice of the Legislature, the Hon. Mr. Tweeddale did nothing more than his duty, and there was no occasion for the cheap talk and sneers indulged in by Mr. Potts and other opposition members. The fact is that the cheese industry went to the bad under the rule of the Flemmingites, and the government is now trying to rehabilitate it and with good prospects of success. Cheese is one of the commodities much used by the men at the front, and there is no reason why this province should not produce a large quantity of a superior grade.

Premier Foster, in replying to the congratulatory address presented by his legislative supporters on the occasion of his first anniversary as Premier, expressed the hope that at the next election young men actively engaged in business and professional life would come forward as candidates for the Legislature. Hon. Mr. Foster is himself a young business man of the very finest type, and the example he has set by entering politics and the success he has achieved will no doubt encourage many young men to take a more active part in public affairs. Hon. Mr. Foster enjoys the distinction of being the first man in this province since Confederation to be called from mercantile life direct to the premiership. He has bitter and unscrupulous opponents, but none have even hinted at anything which might be construed as a reflection upon his personal honor and integrity.

The action of the City Council in purchasing a pulmotor will be approved by the citizens, but there are quite a number who do not understand why it was found necessary to make the purchase through a middleman. In cases of this kind money can usually be saved by buying direct from the manufacturer.

Mr. Stanley E. Elkin, M. P. for St. John, declared in Parliament last week that the fuel controller was a joke, and that there was no real fuel control in Canada. There are many householders throughout the country who will be inclined to agree with the member for St. John.

J. P. Anglin, who is asking the Federal Government to support his patriotic scheme for the cultivation of all arable lands in the Dominion, is one of the best known builders and contractors in the city of Montreal. If Mr. Anglin succeeds in putting his plans into effect the world-wide food shortage will be relieved. Mr. Anglin has associated with him a number of his fellow contractors, who have men, plant and machinery ready to be utilized in agricultural pursuits.

For School for Blind.

The claims of the School for the Blind at Halifax for financial support from the public were ably set forth Sunday afternoon at the public meeting held at the Opera House. Mr. J. W. Weir was the speaker and His Worship Mayor Hanson presided. Mr. Weir, himself blind, has worked for a number of years on behalf of the school. In his address he outlined the history of the institution from its inception in 1868, and gave descriptions of the various courses of instruction. He also referred to the extension courses which it is expected to establish for home instruction of the blind. Today a Women's Auxiliary for the school is being organized. Mrs. John Black is prominently associated with the organization.

CANADIANS PRAISED FOR THEIR COURAGE

Archbishop of York Delivers Stirring Address at Christchurch Cathedral, Ottawa.

(Canadian Press direct wire.) Ottawa, April 8.—The Archbishop of York preached Sunday morning in Christchurch Cathedral and in the evening addressed a crowded audience in the Russell Theatre. His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire attended. The archbishop sketched the great contest which is being waged as one in which great spiritual issues were involved, in which a victory could only be won by moral and spiritual effort.

He referred to the whole country as being very tired, but unalterably resolved to stick to it to see it through. The archbishop said he would like to bring home the fact that every man must feel today as he never felt before that the honor of his manhood before God was at stake. He alluded to the way the people of the old land had been cheered in the early days of the war by the response of Canada and said they had noted since then how Canada strove to keep up the strength of her manhood and her determination not to fail in her duty to these men.

"Courage at home has been proved of the part your men have played in the fight," said His Grace, amid applause. He said the world was at a turning point in its history. "If this spirit of militarism prevails, there will be no chance for the small nations to open out. We shall be held by the menace of a power restless or irresponsible."

A Great Issue. He declared it was an issue for this generation to settle, and it was impossible to think of terms until it had been settled. Unless the ideals for which the Allies were fighting had been made secure it was not worth while to have peace, no matter how much it would relieve the people's suffering.

In closing His Grace said what was needed was more than faith in our cause—it was the moral strength which more than anything else was needed at this moment in the world's history. "How can we be adequate for a test like this without making ourselves strong with God?" he asked. "As nations we must find out the way to God, not in the German manner of claiming Him as an ally, but by acknowledging Him as our Sovereign."

He said he would like to impress upon all present the fact that religion now was the very essence of patriotism, and he closed by urging Canadians to rise to a new spiritual power.

POMP AND PAGEANTRY ELIMINATED

(Boston Record.) Washington, Apr. 6.—The pomp and pageantry of war has disappeared.

The days are gone when a "thin red line," advancing with colors flying and bayonets gleaming, presented the enemy with easy cannon-fodder.

In the first place, the resplendent uniform has been discarded by all belligerents for one of somber, inconspicuous hue. The reason is obvious—the human target is delineated with dangerous distinctness when bright colors are worn. For almost the same reason, bayonets are no longer burnished. A raiding party, lurking in No Man's Land, cannot afford to have its presence betrayed by the gleam of light from a star shell on a polished piece of steel.

Moreover, the regimental standards usually are left at headquarters. A color sergeant probably would find himself in a difficult position if confronted with the necessity of fighting off an enemy and keeping the flag waving at the same time.

A sad feature of the present war is that there will be no "youngest drummer boy." For many years the proud individual who held this distinction in the Civil war has been dying off by hundreds, so perhaps many post-bellum controversies have been averted by eliminating the picturesque boyish figure.

The blare of bands usually has been associated with memorable advances of troops, but the musicians now can be convinced very easily that trench concerts might prove unhealthy. There still remains, however, the skirl of the bagpipes.

The general of the lace-encumbered uniform and flowing hat plumes has passed out with the horse-hair sofa period, so far as field service is concerned.

No narrative of a heroic charge in which of anyone days was complete without a picture of an officer leading his men with sword in hand. Now, it isn't done. The man with the sword readily is distinguished by the enemy as an officer—and as such a desirable target for rifle and machine gun fire.

In other days, soldiers and officers were represented as gathering nightly about the campfire. In history and fiction, descriptions are not lacking of the anxious officers who studied out plans for the tomorrow's campaign by the flickering flames. Campfires in France, if built at all, are located deep in a dug-out, as their presence above ground would serve admirably as a range-finder for the foe's artillery.

But the element of individual and mass gallantry, nevertheless, still survives—and to a greater extent. As long as history lives men will remember the stand of the French at Verdun, English tenacity at the Somme, the wild recklessness of the Canadians at Vimy Ridge, the sacrifice of the Anzacs at Gallipoli, and the proverbial courage of the Scotch and the Irish, who, it is said, charged into a withering fire at Loos kicking a football before them.

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?

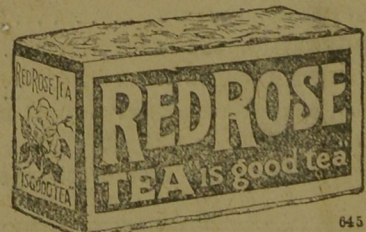

My! This certainly IS good Tea

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea—and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.
