IN THE STOMACH
QUICKLY CURED BY
DR. FOWLER'S
EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY

Mrs. J. Fawcett, Hopewell Hill, N. B., writes: "I am writing you of my experience with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry."

Last summer I was taken so very sick with cramps and pains across my stomach that I sent for the doctor. He said I had summer complaint and gave me some medicine, but it did me very little good. As I was reading your B. B. B. Almanac, I saw Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry advertised, so I asked my sister to go to the store and get me a bottle, and before I had taken all of it I was a well woman, and have not had the slightest return of the trouble since. I cannot say enough for your valuable medicine and always keep a bottle in the house."

You run absolutely no risk when you buy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, as it has been a standard remedy on the market for the past 72 years. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting it, as the cheap imitations are dangerous to your health. Price, 35c. Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS SEE THE SIGHTS OF GAY PAREE

The Old Bastille an Object of Much Interest---Notre Dame de Paris Made a Great Impression---The Great Napoleon Described as Some Fighting Guy

There were two of them, a "hard-boiled" sergeant of marines and a young corporal of engineers. They were typical of the old American soldier and the new. One had worn the know how to tie a civilian cravat. The other had left college to volunteer when the United States entered the war. Both had been wounded and both were entitled to wear the Distinguished Service Cross. Although of radically different antecedents they had become "bunkies" while occupying adjoining cots in the hospital. The sergeant considered the corporal the greatest man in the world in spite of the fact that he said "cawn't". The corporal loved the sergeant, even though he did insist on pronouncing it "kain't".

They sat together on a Y. M. C. A. sightseeing trip to Paris and their comments on the places they visited though couched in different terms and showing at times a different point of view, were typically American. It is hard to tell whether the sergeant or the corporal enjoyed the trip more, because both had a thoroughly good time. The sergeant saw many things that he never had even heard of before; the corporal saw things that he had been reading about and always wanted to see.

First the sight-seeing car took them to the site of the old Bastille.

"Here is where history was made," said the corporal. It is one of the landmarks of liberty in the Old World. What the people did here marked the beginning of the end of the monarchical government in France."

"If I get the dope straight" said the sergeant. "The gang got tired of having the short end slipped to them about this time and they began to holler for the square deal by tearing down the town calaboose. I remember

Mr. J. S. Inch is slowly recovering from injuries which he sustained in an accident at his home about a week ago.

Mr. James Robinson has returned from St. Stephen where he attended the funeral of the late George Foster which took place on Sunday. The remains arrived in St. Stephen Saturday evening accompanied by Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Geo. Burbank of Brookline, Mass. The funeral was held under the auspices of the Masonic Order.

the time I was in jail down at San Domingo for bouncing one off the chin of one of them unbleached police men and the boys tore the shack down and got me out. I guess it was about the same sort of a racket as them Frenchmen put on here."

Notre Dame de Paris made a great impression on the corporal.

"This is one of the most famous churches in the world, sergeant," he explained "It was started in 1163."

"Sure," said the sergeant. "That was the year Eddie Plank broke into the big league. But they musta had stone masons in them days at that, for she looks as good as new. And them big windows mighta been put in yesterday. But of course nobody was in a hurry when it took over a hundred years to build the place. I'll bet that them fellows was getting paid by the day like union carpenters."

Some Bird

At Napoleon's tomb the sergeant was the one impressed.

"I take off my hat to that bird," he said, saluting solemnly. "Some fightin' guy. He woulda been in the Marines if he had lived in our days. Say, he certainly run them Prussians and Austrians and Eyetalian's ragged for a time, didn't he? And Wellington never woulda slipped it over him at Waterloo if the old man Grouchy hadn't lost his way and gummed the game. Some fightin' guy, I'm here to state."

"Yes, he was a great soldier," said the corporal. "The greatest soldier of modern times. But his philosophy was faulty. He let his ambition run away with his judgment."

"I don't know nothing about his philosophy" broke in the sergeant. "But there wasn't nothin' the matter with his nerve. He met all comers as fast as they could come to him and there wasn't none of them clamorin' for encores."

The drive through the Bois de Boulogne was a delight to both the sergeant and the corporal. As the automobile rolled through the miles of shaded boulevards they agreed that there was nothing to beat it in all the world.

"Notice how well this park was planned?" said the corporal. "It seems that all the trees bordering the roads are of the same size. Here again is evidence that the French took plenty of time about beautifying things. And how well everything is kept up. The people of Paris evidently have a great respect for law and order, so there's not even so much as a scrap of paper on the ground, and the great American banana peel is conspicuous by its absence."

"Oh, boy, wouldn't I like to take Maggie for a row on that lake!" exclaimed the sergeant as the automobile rounded a turn and came within view of the beautiful stretch of water. "Say, I'd give my next month's pay to have a chance to spend Sunday afternoon out here with her. But at that you'd be risking your life rowing on that lake if it was crowded. Some of the French handle their oars as if they were trying to fly. That bird over yonder will drown his best girl if he don't quit splashin'."
