PRIVATE DANNY EXPLAINS SOME WAR YARNS

Tells What a "Dud" Shell is Sometimes—How a British Prisoner in Germany is "Carrying on."

(Chicago News)

There certainly is a lot of stories floating around near the front line like where we are up here. Some of them I suppose are not true, but so many strange and queer things has happened during the four years of this war that the fellow who is always saying that such and such a thing couldn't possibly happen is just showing what a big boob he really is.

I heard a story today about exploded big gun shells that they call "duds" that I suppose people back home will say is made up of what you dream when you smoke hop. Now I don't know for sure whether this story is true or not, but I certainly am not going to say that it isn't true. I could believe anything after being over here a little while. Anyway, here's the story like I heard it, and them that want to turn up their noses at it can go as far as they like:

Some high American officers, it seems, were making a tour of inspection of an outpost and strong point the other day in a sector near here that is held by some other American troops. There was a little firing on but not right near there; but suddenly there was the whistle of a shell and then a dull, heavy thud as it hit, not ten feet from where the party was standing. Well everybody dropped on their faces right in the mud, but when there wasn't any big explosion they all thought it was probably a gas shell and they all jumped into their gas masks.

But gas shells always explode with force enough to break the thin steel shell, and this shell failed entirely to explode. So they sent for the gas officer and he brought a big bag and very carefully put this shell in it and took it off to where he could open it. You understand of course, that if wouldn't have made any difference whether this shell had either been gas or shrapnel or high explosive; it lit so close to the party that if it had exploded they wouldn't have had much chance.

Well, about an hour later this gas officer he come back and he had a kind of funny look about him.

"That wasn't a gas shell after all," he told the colonel. "It was a dud—and a lucky one for us. It was loaded with sand instead of high explosive, and here's something else that I found in it."

The gas lieutenant laid a little crumbled bit of brown paper with some writing on it on the table before the colonel. The colonel picked it up and spelled out the writing and then slowly he read it out loud to the other

TOURIST TRAFFIC

The volume of tourist traffic from the United States this year has been considerably lessened by misleading press dispatches appearing in American and Canadian papers regarding the Canadian Registration Act. It was unwarrantably stated that visitors to Canada from the United States would be compelled to register at a post office before they could secure accommodation at a hotel, that passports were absolutely necessary, and more recently the absurd rumor was widely circulated that women from the United States would not be allowed to return home. This latter ridiculous report is specifically denied by Mr. W. D. Scott, Superintendent of Immigration, who officially designated it as "absolutely without any foundation in fact." Senator Gideon Robertson, a member of the Dominion Cabinet, and Chairman of the Registration Board, is equally positive in his denials of the other mischievous reports. The actual facts are, according to the official statement of the Registration Board, that the Registration Act applies only to people permanently resident in Canada and does not affect even remotely anyone living in the United States; that no registration at a post office is necessary, and that no passports are required. The possession of papers showing the holders to be American citizens is all that is necessary to cross into Canada. At the international boundary line the holders of these papers are given an identification card by the Canadian Immigration Officials, which enables the visitors to travel freely where they wish without any interference on the part of Canadian officials.

Senator Robertson, Chairman of the Registration Board, has announced that "neither in the instructions issued, nor the regulations for Canadian registration is there anything that would indicate desire or intention to impose restrictions upon Americans or aliens, entering, travelling in, or leaving Canada."

The experience of those American visitors who have already come to Canada verifies Senator Robertson's statement, but unfortunately there are many across the border who have not read this announcement, and may still be influenced by the false reports to stay at home, spoil their vacation, and cause a mutual loss to themselves and to Canada.

THE YANKEE SOLDIERS DISLIKE FRENCH CASH

U. S. Greenbacks are "Regular Money," and Flimsy French Paper Money is "This Doggone Stuff."

With the American Army in France, Aug. 1.—Forgetting how to figure in "regular money" and learning how to calculate in "this doggone stuff" is one of the first worries of the American soldiers in France.

"Regular money" is good old dollars and cents, nickels, dimes and quarters. "This doggone stuff" is the name applied to French francs, usually paper money, often as low as single francs, or 20 cents, for most small cities have issued local small change currency.

The Americans do not like French paper money. They say it is trash, and easily tears and is hard to count.

On the other hand, the French are shocked when an American crumples French paper up and shoves it in his pocket the "way they do back home." French money is to be handled in big pocketbooks and not crumpled.

"Look at some real money once!" a doughboy told a merchant, and flashed a bright new silver certificate. When he crumpled it up crumpled it up in his fist to show how "real money can be used" the Frenchman almost fainted.

The Americans are paid almost entirely in French money and they are getting used to francs, though they all agree that "a franc's so small it slips through your fingers like a Canadian five-cent piece."
