THE WAR AND CREEDS.

In how many fundamental ways the world will be remodeled by the war, no wise man will now undertake to say. But that men in Christian lands will be thinking in new terms after the war is to be expected.

The millions of soldiers who have faced death, who have eaten, drunk, slept and chummed with death for years in trench and field, who have been in the business of killing, and above all of offering their lives freely for others—these men, or such of them as think clearly—will not thereafter be content with the trifles that before amused them, nor with the conventionalities that once looked important. These men on coming home may be expected to shift any shiftable thing in the social structure.

No great institution will be more severely put to the test by them than the Christian Church. Any part of that structure that has been built of conventionalities or sentimentalities, or of anything not elemental to live, will be severely shaken, if not thrown down. In the fire of a world war like this, only the gold in a life philosophy will remain unconsumed.

In "The Church in the Furnace," a collection of essays by Church of England ministers in war service, Rev. F. R. Barry, of England, says: "We cannot placidly go back to conventional Christianity, the religion of respectability and anxious avoidance of small faults. No padre certainly, and probably no man, can find rest for his soul in the religion of parochial activities. We must have faith that is elemental, simple, majestic and compelling. I am quite prepared to see such large developments in the coming form of Christianity that the religion of our sons and grandsons would seem to be almost another faith, if it were witnessed by our grandfathers."

It is already clear that the thinking soldier in camp and field is not religiously interested except in those few fundamentals that relate to himself, his fellow and his God. To these things he will listen with the greatest interest. The rest he throws away, just as he throws away the pleasant impedimenta of home when he packs his kit for light marching.

Men of vision are preparing for this readjustment of faith and doctrine after the war. Whether this change will bring about a winnowing of creeds or a union of sects, or both, it will have to have within it the vital fire of love toward God and good will toward men, if it is to draw and keep them who have stood in battle, stripped of self, and eye to eye with real life and death.

After one of the most important sessions since Confederation, Parliament was prorogued by Duke of Devonshire at ten o'clock on Thursday night. Sir George Foster announced before prorogation that the government would deal with cases of hardship arising under the Military Service Act, and would make an early announcement in regard to the matter.

The sum of $518,000 was put in the estimates at Ottawa this year to provide for the purchase of branch railways in New Brunswick. The list of roads to be taken over includes the York and Carleton, the Caraquet and Gulf Shore, the Salisbury and Harvey and the St. Martins and Upham. The people of New Brunswick have every reason to be grateful to Hon. F. B. Carvell for the good work on behalf of the province accomplished during the recent session. As Minister of Public Works in the Union Cabinet, Hon. Mr. Carvell has more than lived up to the highest expectations of his friends and supporters.

Accidents on the Fredericton and Newcastle branch of the C. G. R. are of altogether too frequent occurrence this season. The condition of the road could be greatly improved by the installation of new ties from one end to the other, and the work should be done at once. It is well to practice economy in war times, but it should not be done at the expense of an important public service.

Through Our Sieve

Us for the mosquitoless holiday! Friday this week sure was fish-day. Take 'em off and put it on—you know!

What the girls want is fewer marriage engagements.

We freemen, of course, defy the clock—Sunday mornin's.

Charity begins at home, but it isn't charity if it stays there.

It sometimes happens that a foolish person mistakes a disagreeable disposition for a proud spirit.

"Most girls fancy a soldier boy with blue, black, brown or gray eyes," says an exchange. Any kind but pink.

Farmers in New York will soon be scanning the horizon wondering where "that air mail is."

The Bolsheviks are now tinkering with marriage. They may abolish the equator if given a chance.

Some men manage to get a reputation for exceptional ability by doing simple things in a complicated way.

"Dry fly" fishing was given a trial yesterday by some local anglers with much success.

Lemons Beautify!

Strain lemon juice well before mixing and massage face, neck, arms, hands.

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to bleach the skin and to bring out the roses, the freshness and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice alone is acid, therefore irritating, and should be mixed with orchard white this way. Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of orchard white, then shake well and you have a whole quarter pint of skin and complexion lotion at about the cost one usually pays for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smoothen and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of orchard white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

Sinn Fein Leaders

On June 16, Von Bernstorff already had sent a despatch giving an account of the rebellion as far as his information went, and stating that one thousand pounds had been provided for the defence of Casement.

On July 25 he sent a long message giving further news from Ireland and explaining that the work of re-organizing the rebels was making good progress and that their lack of money had been remedied by him.

For a Fresh Rising.

On September 8, in a despatch to Berlin, he enclosed a memorandum from a person called "The Irish revolution director resident in America," which contained detailed proposals for a fresh rising. Any rising, said the Irish revolution director, must be contingent upon the sending by Germany of an expedition with sufficient military force, to cover a landing.

On this occasion the government was to fix the time, and as an inducement, the advantage of having submarine and Zeppelin bases in West Ireland was insisted upon. Von Bernstorff evidently was having difficulty with his tools, for on October 24 he warned his government not to allow a certain Captain Boost, of Rotterdam, to write to Irishmen in America, since his letters were apt to go to the wrong people. Later Captain Boost was arrested by us in British waters.

We again find Von Bernstorff, on December 4, attaching a note surreptitiously to a message passed by the American government, in which he mentioned that Irish leaders in America were pressing for an answer to their proposal of September 8. He seems to have followed this on Christmas day with a message which is missing, for in December of 1916 Foreign Secretary Zimmerman informed him of quantities of munitions which it was proposed to land between Feb. 1 and 15, 1917. He added that it was impossible to send German troops.

On January 18, 1917, Bernstorff replied that his Irish committee declined the proposal as without German troops a rising would be useless. After America's entrance into the war in April, 1917, a line of communication between the German government and the leaders of the Sinn Fein party was opened and there was no reason to believe that messenger service between America and Ireland, designed by John Devoy, was affected.

The negotiations between the executive of the Sinn Fein organization and Germany have been virtually continuous for three and a half years. At first a section of Irish Americans was the intermediary for most of the discussions, but since America's entrance into the war communication with the enemy has tended to be more direct. A second rising in Ireland was planned for last year, and the scheme broke down only because Germany was unable to send troops.

This year plans for another rising in connection with the German offensive on the western front were maturing and a shipment of arms from Germany was imminent.

An important feature of every plan was the establishment of submarine bases in Ireland to menace the shipping of all nations.

"In the circumstances, no other alternative was open to the government if useless bloodshed was to be avoided, and its duty to its allies fulfilled, but to intern the authors and abettors of this criminal intrigue."

Discretion is now the better part of Hosiery Buying

MANY EXECUTIONS IN FINLAND

(Canadian Press direct wire.) London, May 23.—Under the White Guard and German regime in Finland, 1,752 persons were executed up to May 1, according to a Finnish socialist who has escaped and whose interview with the Folkeets Dagbladet is transmitted from Copenhagen by the Exchange Telegraph Company.

According to the exile, 516 were executed in Tammerfors, 148 in Turku, 380 in Varkom and 380 in Vasa.

Prisoners taken by the German and Finnish government forces, he says, were treated so badly that many were starved to death.

Germany is calling upon Russia for man power. This surprises nobody but the infatuated bolshevik.
