

THE WORLD A PLACE OF WOE WHEN YOU OWN AN AUTO

"I see they are talking of a big government license fee on automobiles used for pleasure," said Ganderson. "By the time a man has to pay for a state license and a government license to say nothing of the soaring prices on tires, he will conclude that walking is the best plan."

"In the balmy days of peace," observed Conkling, "there was some pleasure in motoring. If a man had mechanical trouble on the road he generally could find a respectable mechanic in the next town. But the government has commandeered most of the good mechanics, and yeoman and striplings have taken their place."

"Not long ago I was travelling in a hilly country and found that my brakes wouldn't hold. That's a serious business where the landscape is like the side of a house, and when I arrived at a wayside garage I asked the proprietor if he could put in a new brake lining for me. He said he could in about four hours."

"His mechanics were all youngsters who looked as though they had escaped from high school and should be wearing rah-rah sweaters at a picnic instead of musing around cars. But the boss said they were experts, notwithstanding their tender years. I went to the village hotel and had a war time dinner and hung around for four hours, and then went to the garage to see how they were getting along. Say, they had my car all taken to pieces and parts lying around the floor. I was hung up in that little burg two days before they had it put together again, and the expert who did the work had me charged up with a dollar an hour."

"I was journeying on a sandy road," narrated Fessenden, "and was passing a heavy wagon, when the car skidded into it. Then I found that she didn't steer right, and was going lopsided. I managed to push her along to the next town, where the proprietor of the leading garage looked profoundly wise and said I had bent my front axle. It would be a delicate job getting it straight again, but he could do it."

"Then he and his first assistant took off the axle and heated it and pounded it, and wrestled around it all day, measuring and filing, and bending and twisting, until they said they had it just as it was when it left the factory. They put it on again, and charged me $14, and I started off, only to find that the boat was unmanageable as ever."

"I staggered along for seven miles until I came to another town, where there happened to be a real mechanic who had not yet been confiscated by Uncle Sam. He looked at the axle and said it was a miracle the blacksmiths hadn't spoiled it. The trouble wasn't in the axle. A rod connected with the steering gear was bent, and this man fixed it and charged me 60 cents."

"My advice to the chap who wants to go motoring is to take a course in mechanics, and fit himself to fix his own boat when it goes wrong."

"Daddy Long Legs"
"Judy" the little heroine of "Daddy Long Legs" which will be presented at the City Opera House on Thursday August 29th, believed in fairies, because, for years she had told wonderful tales of them to the smaller children in the orphanage and she had faith that they would rescue her from the drudgery of the asylum. When this takes place, at the instance of a somewhat cynical bachelor, who stipulates that she shall not be told the name of her benefactor, Judy discovers that she still lacked that which she wanted most; someone to love and someone to be loved by. The working out of this idea provides the romance. If there remains a bit of the youthful ideals and fancies and understanding of the "once-upon-a-time" sort of thing, which made your childhood the glory-time of your life you will not wish to miss the opportunity of seeing "Daddy Long Legs."

A Question.
"That young doctor fell in love with his first patient, brought her around all right and now they are happily married. Love effected a quick cure."
"That's all very well; but how is he going to handle his next case?"

SCHOONER RUSH SUNK BY A HUN SUB

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 27.—The crew of the new fishing schooner Rush, of Boston, arrived here at noon today on board another fishing vessel, reporting that their ship was sunk by a submarine yesterday morning on the fishing grounds off this coast.

Sailed from Boston.
Boston, Aug. 27.—The auxiliary schooner Rush, sunk by a German submarine off the coast of Canada, sailed from here a week ago today with a crew of 23 under command of Captain Alvaro Quadros.

The vessel, owned by the Commonwealth Fisheries Company, was launched at Essex last Thanksgiving day.

No word has reached the owners from Captain Quadros at the time the press despatches reported the loss of the Rush, but it was known that she had been near the western banks and in other waters in which schooners have been sent down by submarines.

The Rush was of 145 tons and was valued at $50,000.

Fable of the Dime That Walked.
Today a woman stood on Queen street at the corner of Carleton. She had a lone dime in her handbag. Her eye was taken with the oddity of an oil stove displayed in a drug store window. She went closer. A card informed her it was a Labor Day Festival prize—a $45 New Perfection oil stove, oven and cabinet. She did not care to spend her last coin—but she did. Why? Well, the dime saw an opportunity to attain 450 times its own proportions and, jumping out of the handbag, walked in to Mr. Ryan and sold itself for a ticket. And the lady went away satisfied! Moral: Money talks for itself and spends itself easily on a bargain. If you have not already obtained a ticket from the Labor men, the ladies or Mr. Ryan, better get it now.

COLLEGE SPORTS ABANDONED

College sports in the United States will be practically abandoned this fall. In Canada they were abandoned at the beginning of the war in 1914. There are few students left to play games on this continent or in any of the Allied countries.

The colleges are heart and soul in this war, and only the work essential to "getting the main thing over" will be tolerated. They are bending all energies to that effort.

Everybody interested in sports should get the college boys' idea. It will make for the healthfulness of sport. Not everybody can enter the army. But there are other opportunities.

"A beautiful bathing suit, miss."
"Will it shrink?"
"Aw, s'pose it does shrink," interrupted her girl friend. "What do you want to be fussy about a little point like that for?"
