

HOW NEW YORK CELEBRATED VICTORY

and toasts innumerable. And the tale will tell you that he got them—innumerable—and for that matter anything his young heart desired.

The noise? Whistles, tin cans strung on ropes behind motors, rattles, bells, horns, artillery fusilades of back firing motor cars, the shriek of glad human voices above it all? Oh yes, there was noise.

Work? If you were in any normal industry (if you were not a reporter or a cop or a bartender or a chauffeur for instance) you didn't do anything.

Everybody Wore a Flag

Everybody wore a flag. In all the glad turmoil, even when scraps of paper were drifting into your eyes from high buildings, and your hat was being smashed by ultra-enthusiastic strangers, and your ear-drums were bursting from horn noises, you could not forget that.

Good fellowship, friendliness, brotherliness, reigned. The statement that last Thursday's premature celebration was "only a rehearsal" was right. Late last night the din still persisted. Only a short time before he finished a tour of the city the chronicler heard two calls for vocal response.

The first was rather startling for an instant. A spectacled, scholarly-looking chap leaped upon a chair in a restaurant and cried:

"Three cheers for the new-born German republic. May it be modelled after this one."

There was a silence of five seconds perhaps before his hearers quite comprehended what he meant. But then the cheers rang out with sincerity and ardor. If that is what is to come to Germany—so this small assemblage decided—good luck to 'em.

That restaurant was no place for a sober, sedate historian of the day's facts. If he wanted to write a story it seemed to him necessary that he depart. And he did. For when they began to sing "La Marseillaise" in English and "The Star-Spangled Banner" in French, and to sweep up the broken glasses with quaint Swiss cuss words it appeared as though the afternoon were "finis" And there was yet the night to come.

The Statue of Liberty blazed forth at 3.30 and was bathed in light until the sun came up. The Statue's inspiring spectacle was made possible by the illumination fund raised by readers of The World two years ago.

With the lights of Liberty as inspiration steamship and tugboat and ferry boat captains ordered the loosening of all makers. Searchlights were played by a hundred craft or more in the harbor and the river. Scores of boats sent up vari-colored flares.

WANT GUILTY ONES PUNISHED

Copenhagen, Nov. 12.—The new Bavarian government has sent a message to President Wilson, through Switzerland expressing its fears that the armistice terms will bring chaos to the disordered young republic and requesting that Great Britain, France and Italy be asked to punish the guilty.

WHICH IS YOUR CHOICE?
Canada is asking the loan of a lot of money, but the Germans would ask a great deal more in indemnities. Show which system you prefer.

The message adds that the German autocratic and military party do not deserve mercy.

Break Faith? Never.

The memory of their noble deeds is seared into our hearts, and will live in the hearts of our children, generations hence.

Let our lives, for which their lives were given, be pledged devotedly to the Cause—their Cause—of Freedom and Civilization.

We Canadians must carry on.

Before us, as a nation, as individuals, our way lies clear.

Afar off along the path that leads to Right we hear the cry of those who fell.

We will follow on.

We will finish the work they so nobly began.
