THIS IS ARMY HUT WEEK And The Drive Is Canada Wide

PREMIER BORDEN, who has just returned from the battle zone, and who personally saw the work the Knights of Columbus are doing 'over there,' in making his contribution to the Army Hut appeal, puts the matter before the people of Canada as one of those essentials so needful in winning the war. The text of the Prime Minister's telegram to the Halifax workers follows:

Ottawa, Aug. 31, 1918.

John W. Regan, Halifax, N. S.

Am glad to commend the efforts of the Knights of Columbus raising a fund for supplying the Canadian troops on battlefield with war huts and comforts. The purpose of this fund must command the support of all our people. Am forwarding by first mail, my contribution.

R. L. BORDEN.

GENERAL TURNER'S MESSAGE.

General Turner, commanding the Canadian forces in England, sends the following message:

"I wish you every success in the effort to increase the scope of the Catholic Army Huts in the area of the Canadian forces. I feel they fill a long felt want, particularly amongst the Roman Catholic soldiers, in providing for their religious welfare. I hope you continue these additional comforts for the men."

CANADA-WIDE DRIVE FOR ARMY HUTS SEPT. 15TH TO 23RD

THE CALL IS FROM "OVER THERE"

SUPPORT THE HUTS.

A cable just received from over seas is to the effect that Sir Edward Kemp, Overseas Minister of Militia for Canada, advises all Canadians that the Catholic Army Huts are worthy of the support of all.

As to the work of the Knights of Columbus with the American forces, Gen. Pershing wires: "I wish on behalf of the troops under my command to thank your organization for the substantial service it is rendering the army in France."

In an open letter to the people of New Brunswick, LIEUT. GOVERNOR PUGSLEY says:

"I deem it my duty to urge upon you as strongly as possible the desirability of giving a generous response to this appeal, which is for a most praiseworthy and patriotic object."

THEREFORE:

TO THE CITIZENS OF FREDERICTON AND NEIGHBORING DISTRICTS, THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS, DURING THIS PRESENT WEEK, APPEAL ON BEHALF OF THE ARMY HUTS FOR

A GENEROUS CONTRIBUTION

TODAY and TOMORROW, personal and private subscriptions will be solicited. If, by any chance, you are overlooked, kindly send your donation to the Knights of Columbus headquarters.

HARVESTING AND STORING OF CERTAIN VEGETABLES

While vegetables have been harvested continuously in many gardens in Canada since radishes and spinach were ready for use in early spring, the time has come when the bulk of the crop must be gathered to escape hard frosts.

As beans discolour and mould very readily, it is important to dry them as soon as possible and to keep them dry. They should be spread out thinly under cover, and turned every two or three days until quite dry. If it is necessary to harvest the plants before they are thoroughly ripe they can be hung up outside until dry.

There will be many potatoes which will not ripen before the plants are killed by the frost. If the fully grown green specimens are picked before being frozen, and each specimen wrapped in paper and stored in closed boxes, they will be found, from tests made at the Experimental Farm, to ripen better than by exposing them to the sun. Even if put into closed boxes without wrapping each specimen they ripen well.

Frequently cauliflowers are just beginning to head when it becomes necessary to harvest the mowing to severe frosts. If the plants are pulled and replanted in boxes in the cellar, and kept watered, they will go on developing, and one can have cauliflower for some weeks. Brussels sprouts can also be replanted in this way. Both of these vegetables may, however, be left in the ground for some weeks yet.

If cabbage begin to split and it is not yet time to harvest them, the splitting may be prevented to some extent by twisting the plants so as to loosen them. This checks the flow of sap into the head. If the cellar is warm and dry, and the cabbage have to be harvested owing to the frost, they will keep well for a time outside if covered with leaves.

Where the accommodation is poor, celery may be kept outside in the soil well into the winter by opening a trench, preferably a narrow one fifteen or sixteen inches wide, and deep enough so that the tops of the celery will come about level with the surface of the ground. The celery plants are put close together in it, and before there are severe frosts, a thin layer of straw or leaves is put over the top. When the cold weather comes a heavier covering of leaves may be put over, if it is desirable to leave the celery longer, and then twelve to fifteen inches of soil over that. By putting sufficient leaves or straw over the soil again, frost may be kept out, and the celery dug out as required.

In harvesting potatoes, any which show signs of decay should be kept separate from the rest, and used first thus helping to avoid the development of rot when stored. Potatoes should be dry when they are stored.

Keep onions dry, spread thinly. Squashes, pumpkins and citrons should be kept in a moderately warm not a cool place.

SEEING LIFE THROUGH THE MOVIE SHOWS

A few years ago the Woman Who Saw was a fearful snob! That was before she commenced to "see" before she discovered that the deepest and most fundamental tragedies lie in the paper covered "Nellie Gray and Her Rise in Life"; that all the joy and all the tears in the world lie in the little celluloid reels which she had scorned from her superior heights, and that contentment and deepest happiness spring and flourish where mother "raises" five or seven or nine children on father's salary as a laborer, blissful in her ignorance of birth control and calories and Pullman cars.

Now she goes regular to the movies to all kinds, from the de luxe variety with its psychological devices to arouse the faded emotions of its blasé audience to the little mushroom affair which springs up in the night, in the store next door, with its pathetically eager manager, its woeful absence of atmosphere, its lurid films and its childlike audience.

And it was in one of her "movie" indulgences that she discovered how truly human the exalted "movie" star can be; and how "Murder Will Out!"

She found herself seated directly behind several rows of children, in age from 6 to 16, all dressed in the same homely blue garm. Children from an orphan asylum, of course, out for a treat, and so enjoying it! Not a sound from them, not even a whisper—yet they were following the thrilling escape in an uncannily absorbed fashion. Was it true that that orphan asylums did smother spontaneity and kill child nature by their soul scarring systems? And a wave of pity swept over the Woman Who Saw! Followed by another wave, more overwhelming as the lights flashed on and she saw many little fingers flying about in that bewildering, rapid movement with which the dumb speak. Deep agitation was expressed in all the eager faces and probably by the nimble little fingers.

What was the trouble? They all seemed so puzzled.

So the Woman Who Saw, made bold by her curiosity, spoke to the slender gray lady in charge, and asked what had caused all the flutter.

The explanation made her imagination run riot with its possibilities. "Our children are taught lip reading you see, and they are very distressed because the hero said, 'Damn that light! How can I look soulfully into your eyes with that glaring like h—!' when he should have been saying, 'The world is mine if you will flee with me!' It is a blow to romance, isn't it?"

But the Woman Who Saw was secretly glad because those unhumanly good looking movie heroes are really human after all.

And because she can still believe that orphan asylums are not horrible machines for grinding out wooden children!

Of course a girl knows that three-quarters of those glowing promises a man makes before marriage are pure imagination, but she can't help believing them any more than she can resist putting faith in the beautiful pictures in a seed catalogue. To love your neighbor as yourself, use plenty of chicken wire. At this rate it won't be long before Foch is setting a watch on the Rhine.

German military critics still insist that the German high command is leading the Allies on, like mice, into a trap. And indeed the clown prince has been admirable in the role of a piece of cheese.

You can never defeat an ignorant man in an argument.
