

PIPING PARSON OF THE CAMERON HIGHLANDERS IS A MAN'S MAN

Major MacLean-Watt, Back from the Valley of Death, Tells What the Allies are Doing and Expecting to Do on the Western Front—Tells of the Coming of the Highlanders to France.

(New York Sun.)

It happened in Havre. Major Lanchlan MacLean-Watt, pastor of St. Stephen's, Edinburgh, chaplain to His Majesty's forces, with a special shepherding instinct for the Cameron Highlanders, lay in bed early one morning in a certain house in a certain street, wondering when the Camerons and other regiments in which he was specially interested would put in an appearance in Havre.

Then he stopped wondering to listen. Hoot! The bagpipes! And playing the Cameron's own regimental tune, "The 79th Farewell to Gibraltar."

Out of bed stepped the parson and to the balcony in his pajamas. But just as he got through the window the bagpipes stopped. The parson was only a second in getting his own pipes and returning to the balcony. And then he piped! He piped and piped "Farewell to Gibraltar" until the last of the Camerons went by.

"And," said the parson, confirming this story, "I can't pipe so well as I'd like, but I piped for all I was worth. Some of the Camerons I thought would recognize me and excuse the pajamas for the tune. And it was a great glee to see the boys waving their caps and so glad to hear the bagpipes in France."

Decent of Him.

In the afternoon of the same day the parson went out to the Cameron quarters, and among the first men he saw was a captain, a very good friend, a man from Inverness.

"The French are very nice," said the captain.

"Oh, yes," said the chaplain, with a certain bit of reserve perhaps as being a man among men and a parson, too.

"But I don't mean that," said the captain. We were marching up the street this morning and the pipes had just stopped playing, when a little black Frenchman came out on a balcony in this pajamas and played our regimental tune till all our men went past! Wasn't it decent of him?"

"As decent a thing as a Frenchman sould do," said the parson.

"Now some people have an idea that a parson at the front goes into the trenches and calls the men down from the firing step and preaches them a sermon. It isn't done that way. A parson is on hand when he's wanted, and for myself I often found I could be of use even with the bagpipe. Not that I can play as well as I'd like, nor at all when better players are present, but I can pipe when there's a time for it. Often at the end of the station while waiting for a train and at odd times behind the lines I'd take out the bagpipe and play a tune.

"The boys like it and they gather around, and by and by we find maybe that we're having a little chat. The French are the most enthusiastic about the bagpipe. Whenever it's played they come in great numbers,

All Knew "Boko."

"There was among us a man who had the nickname of 'Boko,' and he was a lovely man though he had a very prominent nose, which gave him his name. He's dead now. I noticed that when a man has a lot of friends and attracts a lot of attention he is either very good, very fine or he may be a very unpleasant sort. Well, Boko was known and liked by everybody, but he didn't know any French. The boys loved to take him to little shops where he purchased some things and the shopkeepers said, 'Merci, beaucoup!' They took Boko around to all the shops and when he bought anything the shopkeepers always said to him 'Merci, Beaucoup!' And then the boys exclaimed, 'Fancy everyone in France knowing your nickname—soon.'"

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any farther. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."
