Seed Grain, 1918

Good Seed is scarce. Place your order now with your County Councillor. The Department of Agriculture has ordered wheat and oats through the Seed Branch, Ottawa. The germination is carefully tested.

The Seed is now stored in the elevators at Quebec, thus avoiding transportation difficulties and guaranteeing delivery.

The Department requested the co-operation of the County Councils in the distribution. Seed will be forwarded at their order in car lots, thus avoiding local freights and much handling.

Wheat will cost about $3.00 per bu. shel in bags laid down.

The Seed Branch is yet unable to fix the price on oats. Definite prices will be stated in this space immediately they are at hand.

New Brunswick is expected to bread herself for the duration of the war. Every farmer should grow some wheat.

Agricultural Societies should arrange orders early. Send all orders to the County Councillors immediately.

ed the ledge at the edge of the upper gallery, and Drant went over with the dog. That was the last I saw of him." Gwyn listened to Nan's words and nodded impressively. He realized that the point she had brought out was true. Von Bleck, at the head of his great organization—the eye of the Central Powers—was not an enemy to an individual nor to a country, but he wielded an influence that could be felt by the world. An international spy, whose intrigues could throw history into a frenzied state of chaos, he was a man to be dealt with by the hands of no less important a power than the Federal law. But now, captured and subdued, his domain would be shattered, his abominable system wrecked and his network of spies, which spread over the country like a web, would be without a leader.

And Gwyn, young though he was, was the man who had caused the downfall of this mighty power. He had proven himself stronger, craftier and greater than Von-Bleck. He had conquered where the wealth and influence of a nation had been exerted to cause his failure. But as he sat ruminating and musing over the events of the past few months it was not his conquest, his accomplishment or his importance that confronted him. Confronted was farthest from his thoughts. Instead, it was his personal happiness that brightened these moments of his life. In evidence of this fact, he glanced continually at Nan who sat, clothed in the glory of her new life, looking out the window.

"It is wonderful," he told her, "to have found you hidden in the mountains, there waiting for me, and to be able to bring you back. Nan, dear, I believe it was a higher power than mere coincidence that took you to the home of old Don Carlos and that

STEAMER IN BAD POSITION

An Atlantic Port, Feb. 5.—Efforts by three government vessels to float an American steamer which ran ashore off the New England coast last night have been in vain and the ship's position was reported as less favorable today. As she lies now she is exposed to westerly and southwesterly winds with the ice floes forcing her higher up on the shoals. She is so far in shore that the crew carried on a conversation with the coastguards by a megaphone.

A COLD WAVE AT BOSTON

Boston, Feb. 5.—A cold wave that sent temperatures away below zero swept over New England last night and held on today with little prospect of a break. The mercury in Boston dropped to ten below at seven o'clock this morning, and reports from many points indicated intense suffering due largely to lack of fuel.

brought me to the same place in the accomplishment of my life-work. It seems a shame that we have to leave it all behind us, with those who were so brave and loyal during the struggle."

"We're just going away for a time," she answered. "We aren't leaving it behind—we couldn't. The last thing Casey said to us at the station, after you had told him to take your place while you were away, was, 'Be sure to come back soon.' And I told him that we would."

"And we shall," agreed Gwyn. A hand touched Gwyn on the shoulder and startled him from his happy reverie. He turned quickly and found himself facing the conductor.

"Is this Mr. John Gwyn?" The trainman was holding in his hand the yellow envelope of a telegram.

"It is," answered Gwyn to the inquiry.

"This was received at Denver, sir. We have just pulled out from there."

Gwyn took the telegram and the conductor nodded and departed. With nervous fingers he tore the envelope open. He could not tell from the outside where it was from and his imagination worked rapidly as he thought of its possible contents. Perhaps Casey was in trouble; or it might be that Von Bleck—

He unfolded the paper and read, while Nan scanned the line from his side:

"Check for two million dollars was deposited to your credit in Fifth Avenue National Bank this morning. Wires from Barstow have given details. Newspapers are anxious for your arrival, but not as much as we. Congratulations to you—and Mrs. Gwyn."

"BALTERMAN." "And now, little girl," said Gwyn as he listened to the sound of the grinding wheels bearing them to the east, which sounded like music in his ears, "the door is open, and we are about to pass through to a new life and a new happiness."
