SOME GIRLISH IDEAS RELATING TO MATRIMONY

Ambitious Preferences and Aspirations
Reistered by Means of a Symyosium ---
Some Typical Answers Given for the Benefit of Public Education in Juvenile Pyschology

Perhaps it may be taken for granted that girls will be girls even in Texas. It has not been recorded that girls are more given to "symposiums" than are newspapers. but in certain matters they are quite likely to resort to such methods of expressing the variations of class sentiment. A symposium, of course, is somewhat different from a plebiscite, which is frequently necessary to determine such important matters as class mottoes, class ribbons, class flower, etc. A Symposium settles nothing, but merely registers personal preferences, fundnesses, ambitions and aspirations. As an institution then the symposium is much like the theatre—its chief function is entertainment.

Anyway we are told that the girls of members of the senior class, we hope—have been conducting a symposium for the purpose of recording the qualities they will demand in their husbands. A few typical answers have been published for the benefit of public education in juvenile psychology, and here they are:

He must have a chummy roadster and earn $5,000 a year, and he must be literary inclined.—Lois.
My man must earn $7,000 a year. He must have a convivial roadster and not belong to any clubs.—Gladys.
He must be good looking and a fine dancer and earn at least $10,000 a year.—Jewel.

I want an ambitious man; his looks and earning capacity does not matter.—Cecile.
My man must have refinement and good morals; the rest can take care of itself.—Hortense.

I wont marry unless I can have either a lieutenant or a captain.—Rieta.
These six examples of girlish ideals are perhaps fairly representative of the proportion of financial, moral and social considerations that might be found in the mass of mature feminine appraisals of the desirable qualities of a husband. The juvenile ingenuousness revealed is probably characteristic of the whole symposium, but the aspirations are scarcely to be laughed at on that account. Some may think it regrettable that half the number have been moved to mention the matter of money in defining their ideals but it is fairly safe to predict that within twenty years all six will have reached the conclusion that money is a highly important consideration. The amount of true idealism now manifested in this respect is considerably greater than it is likely to be after experience has dulled the edges of illusion.

But it is to be noted that the financial requirements expressed do not seem to be based on practical considerations. A few years of domestic experience teach a girl various hard and fast facts about the indispensability of money, but Lois, Gladys and Jewel seem to regard money only as the means to realizing delirious dreams of social enjoyment. Jewel for instance who wants a ten-thousand-dollar husband who is good looking and a fine dancer apparently pictures married life as a pleasant course of fox-trotting and waltzing for which the chief requisite is a skillful and attractive partner. She has a notion, likely enough that a ten-thousand-dollar allowance would be ample to provide the necessary dancing frocks and probably has not reckoned on the beans and potatoes and oatmeal and beef-shanks and brooms and mops and coal and gas and 5,384 other items necessary to the maintaining of a menage.

It is rather surprising that automobiles are mentioned by only two out of six girls who are thus discussing the necessities that must accompany a satisfactory husband. This was probably an oversight on the part of the others. Anyway, it is a safe guess that before they have been married a year all six will be yearning for motor cars even Hortense who now cherishes the beautiful dream that nothing matters but "refinement and good morals."

PRISONERS ROUNDED UP BY CAVALRY

With the British Army in France, Aug. 9.—Prisoners rounded up by the British cavalry divisions are coming back rapidly. Early this morning the combined Franco-British forces began following up the victory of yesterday from the positions reached last night. Reports received from along the front shortly before eleven a. m. said that satisfactory progress was being made.

The French at the south bend of the Somme began their push forward at the same time as did the British this morning, and it is not officially confirmed that they have captured Le Quentin.

The enemy in the Montdidier sector is now certainly in an even more precarious position than yesterday. The wide flung operations of the British cavalry menace all the men and materials the enemy has in this part of their front.

The prisoners taken by the British forces in yesterday's fighting totalled 260 officers and 11,321 of other ranks.

Before and After.
He used to beg her for a kiss,
Since that to him meant perfect bliss,
And as they sat in sheltered spot,
He sometimes got one, sometimes not.

He begs her for a dollar now,
For wife is boss, as all allow,
He has to argue quite a lot,
And sometimes gets one, sometimes not.

A lot of fresh ones who think they are early birds wake up to find they are only worms.
