

EVIDENCE TAKEN AT THE JORDAN SANATORIUM

about six weeks.

We bought coal last winter from the Fundy Coal Company of MacCan N. S. We ordered four hundred tons the first time from Le-Blanc, Moncton, and also bought two hundred tons more from him later. The price we paid was $4.75 F. O. B. Fundy mine, plus $1.05 freight per ton. We also bought two car loads more of about sixty tons. We bought ten tons of hard coal from Messrs. R. P. & W. P. Starr. We also burnt some hardwood in power house and some in the kitchen about seventy-five cords in the power house, also burnt some hardwood in kitchen and for the jacket heater.

There is a bathroom in each ward heated by separate jacket heater, and three bathrooms in the main building heated by jacket heaters in the basement.

There is a four inch soil pipe from each ward and an eight inch main. The soil pipes get clogged by carelessness of the patients. I was not here when the drainage was put in.

There is a four inch soil pipe from the laundry. It gets plugged up quite often and we have to have it cleared out.

The sewerage goes into an antiseptic filter in the cesspool and comes out clear into the lake.

Our water supply for closets and washing comes from the lake and for drinking purposes from a bored well.

Q. Have you any suggestions to make?

A. Yes, I would suggest buying coal and getting it put in in the summer time. We could have bought four hundred tons last fall for this year's delivery from the Dominion Coal Company for four dollars per ton, but we could not buy it because Dr. Townshend said we had to pay cash down for it and that the Institution could not finance it on that basis.

I think the clinkers and cinders from the power house should be used on the road to the station.

There is no drinking water piped in and connected with the three vacant cottages. The water for washing purposes is connected by pipes. There is sewerage from the three vacant cottages to the cesspool.

There is no adequate fire protection for the building. There is no hose, as the old ones are all used up, and there are no fire chemicals in the building.

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Just at present sugar is not a topic with which even to sweeten conversation in the home.

The average man who tells all he knows is working on a very small contract.

Lots of men who are clever in other things never seem to be able to think and talk at the same time.

THE PEOPLE'S GOVERNMENT DRURY'S SLOGAN

Toronto, Nov. 21.—A new angle on the prophecies about the new Coalition Government in Ontario was given last night by Premier Ernest C. Drury himself in addressing the banquet of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario when he said that he hoped his Government would soon come to be known as "The Peoples' Government." He spoke humorously of the of the tribulations of himself as cabinet-maker during the past few weeks. "I sat there I might say, like a czar. I said to one, come, and he came. In some cases I said go and he went. But he went with no feeling of disappointment. One man whom I chose for the cabinet position said he was glad to accept and that he felt honored. When he got 200 miles away from Toronto he sent me a telegram to get someone else who would fill the position better. They were all public-spirited. The Government has been taken over in a spirit of public service and without any thought of class legislation. The fact that a Farmers party has been called to power has nothing whatever to do with the legislation. I hope that next time the Associated Boards of Trade will nominate some good candidates."

Forming Policy

The Premier said the policy of the Government was being formulated. The farmers' platform was very broad. They stood for economy, efficiency, the proper treatment of Ontario's resources, development of the mines and education. They would strive to increase the efficiency of the common school in which 90 per cent of the people have to depend for their entire education.

Help Common School

"Excellent as universities may be, we will never have a people educated and fitted for citizenship if we depend on our universities, we want the common school to be a preparation for citizenship. I am inclined to think that the common school course has been altogether too thin. We must get away from the educational machine that we have built up. We've been forgetting the grist we were grinding; We've been forgetting the personal element. More thoroughness and citizenship is needed. Ninety per cent of our people have been going out into life with very little or no educational impetus or inspiration. We must give the key to further education and the will to use it."

Will Make Good

"The Government of this province is simply a business proposition. Can you carry on your business successfully and effectively if you have to consider your aunt's cousins or nephews. In future there must be no passing over merit to put favorites in office. We have an immense chance to make good. We are faced with the proposition of giving efficient government and of cutting down the cost of government. I believe we have the public support behind us. If you give us patience and your support I think we will be able to make good and realize some of the dreams the founders of this province had."

We have an idea they are called the "opposite sex" because they just naturally that way.

A man spans his kids for what his parents should have spanked out of him.

It isn't by their fruits we know the Californian producers; it's by their prices.

BIG STORM PREDICTED

Owing to strange grouping of six mighty planets such as has not been seen in a score of centuries, the United States next December will be swept by the most terrific weather cataclysm experienced since human history began.

It will be caused by the hugest sunspot on record—a sunspot that will be visible to the naked eye. Since men first began to make records of events no sunspot has yet been large enough to be seen without the aid of instruments. This one will be. The sunspot that will appear December 17, 1919, will be a cast wound in the side of the sun.

It will be a leaping explosion of flaming gases; leaping hundreds of thousands of miles into space. It will have a centre large enough to engulf a football.

Such a sunspot will be rich enough in electro-magnetic energy to fling the atmosphere of our earth planet into a disturbance without precedent or parallel.

There will be hurricanes, lightning, colossal rains. It will be weeks before the earth will regain its normal weather conditions.

There will also be gigantic lava eruptions, great earthquakes, to say nothing of floods and fearful cold. December 17-20 are the dates.

I make this startling prophecy with no desire to be merely sensational or alarming. It is merely because my study of the planets has revealed certain results with mathematical certainty, that I now say to you: Be warned in advance. Tremendous things are going to happen from December 17 to December 20, 1919, and afterward.

MARY PICKFORD WINS OUT IN COURT CASE

New York, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Gladys Mary Moore, widely known to motion picture fans as Mary Pickford, was awarded a verdict by a jury here today in a suit instituted by Mrs. C. C. Wilkening a play broker, who alleged that she had obtained a contract for Mary Pickford with the Famous Players-Corporation at a salary of $1,080,000, and that a ten per cent commission was due her. At a previous trial a jury had decided in favor of Mrs. Wilkening.

Theft at Woodstock

Woodstock Sentinel: A girl from an up river town registered at the Aberdeen Hotel Saturday and on taking her departure, Monday, forty dollars was missed from one of the rooms. Suspicion pointed to the girl and Sheriff Foster was put on the case. Although very indignant at the prompt method of the law officer, who located her in one of the rooms at the railway station, she was convinced that it would be good policy to return the coin. The girl belongs to a very respectable family and appeared to feel her position very keenly.

Confessions of an Every-Day Wife

By Idah McGlone Gibson

"Theo says he was so concerned with getting the man into the car and reaching help that he paid no attention to who he was. Baur's face was covered with blood. When, however, Theo proposed taking the man to the hospital, Sallie insisted that he should be taken to her father's garage, saying that her reputation would suffer if it were known that she was out riding with Theo on a lonely road so late at night.

"Theo declares that this was the first time he had thought of this aspect of the case, and that it was also the first time he had an idea that my feeling for Sallie might be correct.

"More for my sake than for Sallie's or his own, Theo consented to her plan. Even then he thought the man a stranger and it was not until Robert, Theo's brother, who had caught sight of him at the Saunders' gate, accused him of helping Sallie to bring about Baur's escape that Theo was convinced that the man was really Baur.

"Theo was panic-stricken and determined to leave town and take me with him until things had straightened out a bit. But he made the great mistake of returning to Sallie Saunders' home the night before he came away. There he encountered Mr. Saunders, who accused him of making love to Sallie. They quarrelled and Theo's were the words that the maid, at the inquest, said she overheard.

"Theo then left the house by the French window, which he left open, and found Sallie down by the gate at the end of the drive. He accused her of making him help her in Emil Baur's escape, and she confessed. He saw that she had a revolver in her hand, and he took it from her.

"Then she went mad, Theo says, and simply told him the whole story. Told how she had always loved Baur; said he was a man and all the rest of the male creatures she had ever known were just puppets. Theo finally left her and went up the driveway again, with the intention of sending someone to take care of her, as he saw she was for the moment, insane with worry and fright.

"Before he had carried out his intention, he heard a clock strike, and knowing that I would be waiting for him to go to the station, he simply, as he said, 'chucked the whole thing' and came down to meet me.

"If you knew my husband you would know that that would be just the thing he would do under the circumstances. There would be no thought of cowardice in the matter, for of course at that time Theo had no knowledge of the murder of Saunders. But it was perfectly characteristic of him to say to himself, 'What have I got to do with this matter? Let them all work it out to suit themselves.'"

"What did he do with the gun?"

"He threw it down in the driveway. Then he went to the nearest telephone booth and asked me to meet him at the station. It was not until the next morning that Theo learned from the newspapers that Mr. Saunders had been murdered. Of course, when he read what the maid said he was panic-stricken. It was then he told me the whole story and asked me what he should do. I told him to wait, because I had an intuition that Sallie Saunders would do exactly as she had threatened to do, namely, accuse Theo of the murder of her father."

"To whom has she made this threat?"

"To Theo's brother, Robert."

"Did Robert Symone write this to your husband?"

"No, Robert told Theo when he arrived yesterday. Last night my husband and his brother went to New York."

Donald Graham looked at me quickly as he shot out the one word, "Why?"

"Robert wants Theo to go to South America."

Again the short word, "Why?"

"Robert does not believe in Theo as I do," I answered in a whisper. Donald Graham leaned over and took both my hands. "I am going to believe in him because you do, little woman. Now," he continued, "let us go over the whole thing carefully and as dispassionately as we can. Are you quite sure that you will be able to stand going over it again? You look quite done up."

"Yes. It will give me the comfort that I need to know that someone who can is willing to help me."

"Do not place too much faith in me, dear Margot."

"He thinks of me, too, by my first name," I thought, and again I took courage.

"As I understand it, you hope that no scandal will touch your husband's name. You believe he is innocent, and so do I. We both now know something which the police and detectives have not yet found out. We know that at least Emil Baur was near Mr. Saunders' home the night he was murdered.

"We know that probably another man was there also.

"We know that Sallie Saunders was very anxious to get her lover out of danger. And we also know that in his uncompromising patriotism Mr. Saunders would give up his own daughter to the authorities if he thought she had in any way helped a criminal to escape.

"We can be sure that after what Sallie Saunders has already done for her lover she would not hesitate to swear away the life of another if she thought it would help the man with whom she is infatuated.

"Fortunately, she too has a few qualms, not for her husband, but for herself. If she comes forward and tells her story it will blast her own reputation, for she knows that not only your husband, but also the powerful families back of him will fight for his life. Personally, I think it would be better for all concerned for Mr. Symone to come forward and tell what he knows."

"But the whole pack would be down on him with great hue and cry," I remonstrated. "Don't you see it would be much better, even if the thing should come out, for Sallie to make the first move than for Theo to tell his side of the story and have Sallie insist that he killed her father and was most cleverly trying to cover up his tracks?"

"Perhaps you are right. Anyway, no man is obliged to put himself in an awkward position until it is necessary."
