

SUFFERED WITH BOILS LAST 5 YEARS

Boils are simply a breaking out of bad blood, and anyone who has suffered from them, knows how sick and miserable they make you feel. Just when you think you are cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your misery. All the poulticing and lancing you can do will not get rid of them.

While the skin appears to be the cause of the irritation the real disease is rooted in the blood, and to get rid of these painful pests it is necessary to get rid at the seat of the trouble.

When the blood is purified, cleansed and vitalized, by Burdock Blood Bitters, the boils will quickly disappear, your misery is at an end, and health and strength come back again.

Mr. Robt. Johnson, Barkway, Ont., writes: "I have suffered very much during the last five years from boils, having as many as five at once. I tried different remedies without any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, which I did, and after taking just one bottle I have had no more boils."

ROTHESAY WON INTERSCHOLASTIC RUGBY TITLE

Defeated Fredericton High on Saturday—McPhail Scored Only Try in First Half.

Rothsay Collegiate School fifteen carried off the championship of the Interscholastic Rugby League on Saturday when they defeated Fredericton High School by a score of three to zero. The game was loosely played neither side showing up well. The backs of both sides were at a loss when they had the ball but the Rothsay backs showed up well in punting several times making good gains. The forwards failed to heel the ball properly out of the scrimmages and there were many penalties for picking the ball out.

First Half

The game opened at 2.30 with Rothsay taking the kick-off. A good long place was made and the ball went into touch on the High School five yard line. The play the first half of the game was continually in High School's territory and finally the ball was carried over for a try by McPhail of Rothsay. Failing to convert the ball was rushed again into Fredericton High's territory and remained there till the close of the first half. During this period the High School showed up poorly in offensive work but played a good defensive game. However they were forced to touch for safety several times.

Second Half

In the second half McGinn kicked off for High School and for a time the ball was in Rothsay's territory. The High School scrim heeled out several times but the ball never got beyond Williams who continually hogged it and tried to do too much individual work. Currie at receiving quarter made several blind passes which resulted in gains for Rothsay. Both sides failed to score in this half. Skinner for Rothsay and Gagnon for High School showed up well. Rothsay followed up closely and several times High School were caught while trying to run back and circle the field. The game ended in a scrimmage near High School's goal line.

Willard Kitchen refereed satisfactorily although several close decisions called for time being taken out in disputes.

The line up was as follows:

Rothsay C. S.	Fredericton High
Creamer	Fullbacks
Douglas	Halves
Skinner	Gagnon
Teed	Williams
White	Clark (Capt.)

CONFESSIONS OF AN EVERY- DAY WIFE

By Idah McGlone Gibson.

IN THE SIREN'S POWER.

"But Margot, don't you understand" said Theo. "Sallie is in love with that cad Emil Baur and she would sacrifice everything and everybody for him."

"I understood that long ago," I answered. "When did you find it out?" "Only last night. O, God, it seems ages since that time."

"Begin at the beginning, Theo," I said again as I quietly pushed him into a chair and took hold of his hand to steady him a little.

"It all began with my damned egotism and curiosity," Theo answered.

"You know where we met Sallie in New York. I thought you treated her very nastily. After you went out shopping that day I met her again in the corridor and she invited me to her room. She told me she was going to have a child and that she could not conceive why you had taken such a dislike to her."

"You would think Margot would have some sympathy for the mother of her brother's child," she said pathetically. "I confess I was very angry with you, Margot. I thought you were using Sallie very badly, and I told her I was going to have it out with you. She made me promise I would do nothing of the kind."

"When I got up to go she put her hands on my shoulders and held up her mouth to be kissed—I am your sister, you know," she said, and looked like a pretty child while saying it.

"It is useless, Margot, to disguise anything at this stage of the game. If Sallie was my sister by brevet—having married my wife's brother—her kisses were far from sisterly. I left her thinking what a fascinating little woman she was, and—God forgive me—I was fast coming to the conclusion that you had been colder to her than I had ever seen you before to one of your own sex because you were jealous of her charm and instant appeal to men."

"She wrote me two or three times from the place in the south where she had gone and, with fatuous conceit, I thought it was because she was interested in me. I found out from her letters that her baby was born dead and that she was coming North soon."

"One day I got a long night letter saying she was on her way home and was going to stop off at Springfield on some business connected with the death of her husband. She said that she had heard that a certain 'buddy' of his was to be in town that day, and he would have some papers for her from her dead husband."

"She said she was meeting him there in preference to seeing him in her home, as the whole family of her husband for some unknown reason were violently prejudiced against her."

"Of course I believed her excuse, as I knew that you disliked her most thoroughly and I thought most undeservingly. She told me she wanted me to come over and meet her, so that she might have one friend if anything came up that would make it imperative for her to tell her husband's family that she had met this man alone."

"Well, I did this, Margot, and I confess to you that when that woman was with me she exerted a most unholy influence over me."

"As you know, we stayed in Springfield until very late, not getting home until the next morning. After she arrived home I either saw her or talked with her over the phone every day and I began to think I was in love with her. She told me in so many words that it was unfortunate that I had married before I went to war, as men changed materially while going through great crises of that kind.

"God forgive me, when I was with her I almost came to believe that she, and not you, was my mate."

"I know now that in subtle ways—although she never told me so—she finally made me think that you did not care greatly for me; that you were one of these cold, self-contained women, sufficient unto yourself."

"At last things came to a showdown and she had promised me to take a late supper at a more or less notorious roadhouse."
