CONFESSIONS OF AN EVERY-DAY WIFE

By Idah McGlone Gibson.

WHEN A WOMAN LOSES HER SOUL.

"We will leave Margot's name out of this, Sallie," I said roughly, when she referred so contemptuously to you, for it sickened me to understand at last the kind of a woman she was and why you did not like her.

"I'm perfectly willing," she answered, and then she turned on me again. "That's right, you men always keep your wives protected from the world, but it is women such as I am that intrigue you. Go back to your dear little wife and tell her I sent you. That I used you to help me with a real man—the man I love—and then cast you away from me as I would anything else I had no use for."

"Why can't you dolts see that goodness never gets you anywhere? Why should one with a brain like Emil's or even mine, care how many hurts—how much ruin we leave behind. Either one of us is worth more to the world than a hundred cowardly duty-bound souls.

"This world—and the next if there is one—is not for the selfish, the dutiful or the good. It is for the mighty, the man or woman who steps out from the rest and rules them by right of might."

"Sallie," I answered, "your Hun lover has very carefully imbued you with the creed of the German philosophers who once preached ruthlessness and greed. But surely you can see what it has brought your lover and his country—destruction. And what it has brought to you."

"But if they had all been like my Emil, it would have brought glory," she answered.

"Do you call confinement in prison glory? Sallie, I am going out of town tonight and because of your great love, even if that love is misplaced, I could almost feel it in my heart to pity you."

"Pity me!" she exclaimed with wonder. "Does the worm pity the bird who devours it? Go, I have talked too long with you already. I expect Emil is waiting now to bid me good-by. Go, go; he would probably kill you if he found you here."

"Never fear about him killing anyone, even himself," I said. And do you know, Margot," Theo interrupted himself to observe, "I almost think someone else killed that old man. I feel that Emil Baur is to big a coward to have done it."

"Did you tell Sallie of your quarrel with her father?" I asked.

"Yes, argot, I did, but I do not think she sensed it much, as her whole mind was obsessed with the one idea of Emil Baur leaving her."

"What make you think he went up to the house?"

"To see her, to get the revolver and perhaps some money. Read the rest of what it says in the paper, I was too excited to do it."

"It does not say very much more, Theo, except that the police are looking for an electric car that stood before the entrance to the house in the earlier part of the evening."

I read this and then looked at Theo in consternation. It was my car they were looking for. Instinctively we clasped each other's hands. "Theo, you did not ask someone to take your car back from that place?"

"No, I drove it to the station."

"But you told me you had it sent home."

"Yes, I telephoned from a drug store for the chauffeur to come after it."

I gave a sigh of relief.

"Do you think I had better go back and tell what I know?" asked Theo again.

"I think we had better wait until tomorrow and see what the developments are."

"What does the paper say about Sallie?"

All Canada is alive with the activity of production and distribution.

There's a demand for what we make.

There's a market for what we grow.

The wheel of prosperity is spinning.

But it doesn't turn itself.

We—You and I—must help to keep it turning

The driving force of the wheel of Prosperity is the Victory Loan.

It will keep up the foreign market for our surplus agriculture and industrial products.

It will help finance our National undertakings and expenditures.

It will keep the Wheel of Prosperity turning.

Do you realize what it would mean to have the Wheel of Prosperity slow up and stop?

It would mean loss of employment and agricultural and industrial stagnation. It would result in loss to you and each and every one of us.

So get behind the Victory Loan.

There is only one way to keep the Wheel of Prosperity turning—that is to
