AN IMPORTANT SPEECH
BY SIR ROBERT L. BORDEN

Delivered at an Ottawa Luncheon in Honor of the Prince of Wales—The Relation of Canada to the Empire Discussed—Greetings Extended to His Royal Highness on Behalf of the Canadian People.

Ottawa, Aug. 29.—At the government luncheon this afternoon in honor of the Prince of Wales, the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, speaking briefly emphasized what he described as the "direct and perfect relation between the crown and the people," of the British Empire.

"A few days ago it was my privilege to welcome His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales when he first set foot upon Canadian soil.

I am happy now, on behalf of the Canadian people to renew that greeting. But in truth there is little need of this, for our people have made their welcome felt wherever the Prince has come among them.

Within the present month he has come among us for the first time, but not as a stranger. The youth of Canada who have returned from their glorious service in the great cause of freedom and justice, have him as their comrade.

He comes to us as a Canadian in another and even higher sense. With the growth and development of self-government in the great dominions, it has come to pass that the tie of a common allegiance is the chief bond which unites the nations of the British Commonwealth. For each of these nations there is but one crown acting in each dominion and in every province or state upon the advice of Ministers responsible to the people and invested with their mandate. Thus throughout the Empire there is created a direct and perfect relation between the crown and the people. The King, acting through his ministers is the active head of government in each dominion. Fulfilling the will of the people in the selection of his advisers, he stands above party or faction the acknowledged head of the state.

Followed Old Lines

The development of constitutional relations in this country has proceeded upon lines identical with those which have been followed in the Mother Country. To that development men of both our great pioneer races have concentrated their labors and given a worthy contribution. It is notable that Canadians of French origin have grasped thoroughly the principles upon which that development should proceed. Among them I may be permitted to pay tribute to one great man, long a most conspicuous figure in the public life of Canada. For many years we were brought into very direct and intimate association in public affairs. Often, but by no means always, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and I differed in our opinions upon public questions; but neither of us ever doubted the sincerity of the others "convictions." I mourn his loss as that of a great Canadian and a valued and intimate friend.

We still speak almost in the shadow of a war which tested to the utmost the resources and the unity of our empire. The power of an organization which seemed so loosely knitted together as our community of nations was not foreseen or realized by the militarist autocracy of Germany.

Indeed, those who laid the foundations of the complete autonomy which the dominions regard as their birth-right did not quite comprehend how well they had builded.

The Great War

The recent war arose in one sense out of treaties and understandings to which the dominions were not parties and as to which their ministers had not been, and in some cases, could not have been consulted. We believed that the existence of the Empire was at stake, and in no dominions was there any hesitation as to its duty.

During the progress of the struggle more perfect co-operation became necessary and was attained. The guiding principle was laid down that within our commonwealth of nations equality of nationhood must be recognized, preserving unimpaired to each dominion the full autonomous powers which it now holds, and safeguarding to each by necessary consultation and by adequate voice and influence its highest interests in the issues of war or peace. For each nation complete control of its own affairs; for the whole empire necessary co-operation according to the will of the people, in all matters of common concern.

After War Conditions

I have not spoken of material affairs burdens entailed by the war are heavy but in the end, I believe we shall not find them overwhelming or even oppressive. New ideals have arisen; there are new conditions to be faced both here and elsewhere within the empire. Problems of peace will be as difficult and as complex as those of war. In the years that lie before us we must meet them with the same united purpose and the same indomitable spirit as in the years of struggle from which we have just emerged victorious. I trust that the Prince of Wales will convey to their majesties our profound appreciation of their unsparring devotion to duty and of their splendid courage and fortitude while there fell upon them the shadow of the nation's sacrifice during all these terrible years of conflict. Nor do we forget the personal consideration and kindness always accorded by their majesties to the gallant soldiers who went forth from our shores.

Already his royal highness has journeyed far within the confines of Canada; but as yet he is only at the verge of that immense territory which is the heritage of the Canadian people. The vastness of our country makes it impossible for him to visit all great centres of population; but everywhere his welcome would be as warm as that which he has received and that which still awaits him.

We bid him God-speed in the journey that still lie before him, and we trust that his memories of this visit to the premier dominion of the empire will be as happy as ours.

PAULINE FREDERICK'S HOBBY

Pauline Frederick is a motor boat enthusiast. She owns a twenty-five foot racing boat and spends her time between pictures racing about Catalina Bay. In her latest picture "Bonds of Love," by Louis Sherwin, which is to be released soon, Miss Frederick was called upon to exploit her hobby before the camera. The action demanded that she race after a runaway motor launch and rescue a little boy without stopping her own boat. She turned the trick and had a most enjoyable time doing it.

William C. Dowland rented a submarine for some scenes in his latest picture for Universal. Jacques Jaccard filmed an air picture at the same time. Their respective players were, therefore two miles apart—one above the other.

The Bray photographs, which have been an interesting part of the Paramount program, will, in the near future bear the Goldwyn trade mark. By a deal consummated in New York Mr. Bray has taken his cartoons to Camuel Goldwyn's company.
