

A Dyspepsia Cure

M.D. advises: "Persons who suffer from severe indigestion and constipation can cure themselves by taking fifteen to thirty drops of Extract of Roots after each meal and at bedtime. This remedy is known as Mother Selge's Curative Syrup in the drug trade." Get the genuine. 50c. and $1.00 Bottles.

RAISED AMERICAN BILL

Circulating in Halifax and Probably Here—Gleever Piece of Work.

An American bill has made its appearance in Halifax which is apparently a "raised" one. It has the appearance of a genuine ten dollar bill and is the Federal Reserve Note. In this series of paper money the one dollar and the ten dollar bill designs are similar, with the exception of the ten dollar numbers in the four corners and the ten dollar script in the centre. Enterprising talent has taken advantage of the fact and raised the one dollar bill to ten dollar value. Two corners are clipped from a ten dollar bill, not impairing its value, and the numbers are placed directly above the numerals on the dollar bill. The figure one is carefully replaced by the figure ten. These bills of which over twenty thousand dollars worth have been placed on the American market, were usually passed at theatres or places where there were crowds of people

THE EXTRACT OF THE FUTURE

CONSTIPATION OR COSTIVENESS

Constipation, although generally described as a disease, can never exist unless some of the organs are deranged, which is generally found to be the liver.

There is nothing more productive of general ill health than constipation of the bowels and a regular action is absolutely essential to general health. One of the most common, painful and troublesome troubles caused by constipation is piles, and unless the bowels are kept open by the use of a good laxative such as Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills the whole system will be poisoned and many different complications of diseases arise, so if you would be well, keep your bowels regular.

Mr. A. Roder, Hastings, St. E., Vancouver, B. C., writes: "I desire to express my thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I had been suffering from constipation for two years, and also had a bad cough and headaches, I tried all sorts of cures and remedies, but got no relief until I was advised to try your pills. I got relief after the first few doses."

Some of the men under arrest furnished bail and supplied a trust company with the means of securing their freedom. After they had accepted the money the company found two of the doctored bills in their remuneration. It is likely that the same raised bills are circulating in this section.

EARLY DAYS IN FREDERICTON INTERESTINGLY DESCRIBED

Some Extracts From a Diary Kept by Mrs. Lewis Fisher, Grandmother of the Late Judge Fisher— Cold Weather was Hard on the Loyalist Settlers of St. Ann—The First Store was Kept by a Man Named Cairnes—Some Interesting Historical Data of Pioneer Times.

(W. C. M. in St. John Globe)

Perhaps the oldest Loyalist burying ground in the province is that at the lower end of the city of Fredericton on the Elmcroft property, the residence of Mrs. Henry Ketchum. It is on a point of land made by the river bank and a ravine and is overshadowed by trees. Originally there were a number of wooden tablets marking the graves which existed there as late as 1850. There are now six granite slabs, much worn with the weather. Only one remains with any inscription. It is as follows:

T. X. B.

D. C. T. D. C. C.

The story of this ancient graveyard is told in a diary kept by Mrs. Lewis Fisher, the grandmother of the late Hon. Charles Fisher, Judge of the Supreme Court, and great-grandmother of W. S. Fisher of St. John. Her story is as follows:

"Your grandfather, Louis Fisher, joined the New Jersey Volunteers on the 7th of December, 1776, and was taken prisoner by the rebels a few weeks afterwards, along with his brother Peter and fifteen others. After an absence of a year and nine months he returned to his duty, October 2nd, 1778, having made his escape from confinement.

"When the war closed the New Jersey Volunteers lay encamped at New Town Creek, near Brooklyn, Long Island. We sailed in the ship 'Ether' with the fleet for Nova Scotia. Some of our ships were bound for Halifax, some for St. John river and some for Shelburne. Our ship going the wrong track was nearly lost. When we got to St. John we found the place all in confusion; some were living in log houses, some building huts and many of the soldiers living in their tents at the Lower Cove.

"Soon after we landed we joined a party bound up the river in a schooner to St. Ann's, the old name of Fredericton. It was eight days before we got to Oromocto, and there the captain landed us, being unwilling on account of the lateness of the season, or for some other reason, to go further. He charged us each four dollars for the passage. We spent the night on shore and the next day the women and children proceeded with some of the party to St. Ann's in Indian canoes; the rest came on foot. We reached our destination the 8th day of October, tired with our long journey and pitched our tents at the place now called Salamanca, near the shore. The next day we explored for a place to encamp for the winter was at hand and we had no time to lose. The season was wet and cold and we were much discouraged at the gloomy prospect ahead of us. Those who had arrived a little earlier in the fall had made better preparations for the winter; some had built small log huts.

Others we were unable to do owing to the lateness of our arrival. Snow fell on the 2nd day of November to the depth of six inches. We pitched our tents amidst the shelter of the woods and tried to cover them with spruce boughs. Stones were used for fireplaces. Our tent had no floor but the ground. The winter was very cold, with deep snows, which we tried to keep from drifting in by putting a large rug at the door. The snow that lay six feet deep around us helped greatly in sheltering us from the cold. How we lived through that awful winter I hardly know. There were mothers that had been reared in a peasant country, enjoying all the comforts of life, with helpless children in their arms. They clasped their infants to their bosoms and tried by the warmth of their own bodies to protect them from the biting frost. Sometimes a part of the family had to remain up during the night to keep the fire going so as to prevent the nest from freezing. Some destitute people made use of boards, which the older ones kept heating before the fire and applied by turns to the smaller children to keep them warm. Many women and children and some of the men died from cold and exposure. Graves were dug with axes and shovels near the spot where our party had landed, and there in the stormy weather our loved ones were laid to rest. We had no ministers and had to bury them without any religious service. The first burial ground continued to be used for some years, until it was nearly filled. We called it the 'Loyalist Provincials' burial ground.

"Among those who came with us to St. Ann's, or who were there when we arrived, were Messrs Swin, Burk-staff, McComesky, three named Ridner Woolley, Bass, Ryerse, Paine, Acker, Lowesberry Ingraham, Buchanan, Ackerman, Vanderbeck, Donley, Smith, and Essington, with some others.

"When the Loyalists arrived there were only three houses standing on the old St. Ann's plain. Two of them were old framed houses, the other a log house. (This stood about at the lower gate of the late Judge Fisher's place). The houses must have been built by the first inhabitants, who were French. There was said to have been two bodies of people murdered here. It could not have been long before the arrival of the Loyalists that the last party were murdered.

"Many of the Loyalists who came in the spring, had gone further up the river, but they were little better off for provisions than were we at St. Ann's. The supplies were expected before the close of navigation but they did not come and at one time starvation stared us in the face. It was a dreary contrast to our former condition. Some of our men had to go down the river with hand sleds or toboggans to get food for their famishing fam-lies. A full supply of provisions was looked for in the spring, but the people were betrayed by those they depended upon to have supplied them. All the settlers were reduced to great straits and had to live after the Indian fashion. A party of Loyalists had gone up the river further, but they were no better off than those at St. Ann's. The men caught fish and hunted moose when they could. In the spring we made maple sugar. We ate fiddle heads, grapes and even leaves of trees to allay the pangs of hunger. On one occasion some poisonous weeds were eaten along with the fiddle heads; one or two died, and Dr. Earle had all he could do to save my life.

"As soon as the snow was off the ground we began to build log houses but were obliged to desist for want of food. Your grandfather went up the river to Captain McKay of the Queens Rangers, who lived in the Parish of Queensbury, was a prominent magistrate and whose wife was a sister of Judge Saunders, for provisions, and found no one at home but an old colored slave woman, who said her master and his man had gone out to see if they could obtain some potatoes or meal having in the house only half a box of biscuits for themselves. Some of the people at St. Ann's who had planted a few potatoes were obliged to dig them up again and eat them.

"In our distress we were gladdened by the discovery of some large patches of pure white beans marked with a black cross. They had probably been originally planted by the French, but were now growing wild. In our joy at this fortunate discovery we called them at first the 'Royal Provincial'
