GREAT WAR VETS LAY THEIR CASE BEFORE PARLIAMENT

Statement Sent to Every Member of the House Urging an Increased Bonus—Soldiers' Settlement Plans Do Not Appeal to Everyone—Discrimination Against Certain Classes of Men—Secretary McNeill's Statement.

Ottawa, Sept. 8.—The demand of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada for an increased bonus, and the steps which have been taken by the Association in this regard are laid before the members of parliament in a statement sent to every member by the secretary of the Association, C. McNeill. In his letter Mr. McNeill states that the step is taken because of erroneous reports which have been given circulation, and this means is taken to place the matter in a proper light before the members.

Dealing with the growth of the demand for an increased gratuity, Mr. McNeill says the soldiers' settlement plans did not appeal to everyone, but no corresponding provision was made for those not agriculturists; vocational training available was not adequate to solve the problem; the housing scheme offers no immediate relief; some families who crossed the Atlantic during the war were repatriated at the public expenditure, while others, equally as deserving, were left to shift for themselves; employment conditions were none too bright. Canadians who served in the Imperial forces, could not participate in the post-war benefits. The war service gratuity was distributed in a manner which discriminated against certain classes of men; disabled men could not secure insurance to protect their dependents and all of these facts accentuated the uneasiness and fostered the demand for a bonus which would enable every man to undertake his own reestablishment independently and in a manner to suit his individual mood.

Want a Square Deal.
"I want a square deal," states Mr. McNeill. The men realize that much has been done in solution of the problem and no criticism is offered to the generous assistance which has been given returned soldiers. However, thousands of the demobilized army are seized with the fear of a precarious livelihood in the future.

Mr. McNeill states that after some controversy the matter came before the Dominion convention of the Association where, as a final compromise, the establishment of a representative tribunal was urged. This body was to investigate the matter thoroughly and impartially and report to the government. The returned soldiers agreed to abide by the findings of this tribunal. The resolution on this subject and the subsequent correspondence is submitted with the letter by Mr. McNeill.

The Dominion command, he states, felt that the men's request submitted to the government was not unreasonable and the adverse decision can only result in further disaffection and discontent.

"Mark you," said Mr. McNeill, "the request has been solely for a fair opportunity to present for thorough investigation various schemes most studiously prepared and which offer possible solution of a vexatious problem with a modicum of expenditure.

"This association founded upon high ideals of loyalty and service has offered the country a sure bulwark against the menace of revolutionary disturbances during a period of grievous unrest, but care must be taken to maintain the confidence of returned soldiers in the established executive institution. It is therefore hoped that no misinterpretation will be permitted in the House of Commons, a request that has been placed before the government by this association."

MOTHER'S PRIVILEGE.

One morning little Mary hung about the kitchen continually, bothering the busy cook to death. The cook lost patience. "Clear out o' here, ye sassy little brat!" she shouted, thumping the table with a rolling pin.

The little girl gave the cook a haughty look.

"I never allow anyone but my mother to call me that," she said.

LITTLE TALES
GATHERED IN A GREAT CITY

(New York Sun)

Her own iceman having failed her the other morning the Woman hailed a passing wagon and ordered twenty-five pounds.

As the polite little driver alighted from his seat to serve her she saw that one sleeve flapped loose and wondered how he was going to manage. Then she saw. From the sleeve emerged a spike which steadily cut its way through the block of ice. It was attached firmly to an artificial arm, extending to the elbow. Cheerfully he did his task, and cheerfully he went his way, the little iceman. There's nothing pluckier than making a deformity work for you, is there?

Midsummer Faith

The elevator was crowded with weary shoppers, many of them looking cross. The elevator girl's tired voice droned monotonous lists of articles kept on the different floors.

"Fourth floor, rugs, carpets, furniture, sporting goods, books and toys—fourth floor please."

At the magic word "toys" a clear, childish voice belonging to the little girl wedged in the midst of the crowd piped up: "Mother."

"What is it dear."

"Mother is this where we saw Santa Claus?"

"Yes, dear."

Certain hard, set lines about the mouths of the various shoppers showed symptoms of relaxing.

"Mother, is he here now?"

"No, dear, not now."

"Well will he be here next Christmas?" persisted the little voice, now a bit anxious.

"Yes, pch, he'll be here next Christmas."
